CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

"My dear Mr. Bertram," said Mr. Acton, "Beardon is enough for both of you, and, to drop all badinage, may be your own for the asking. I know Blanche's noble heart; you were forgiven as soon as you had offended, and, as to the policy of her marrying you, she has no one to say her nay."

"That is what I think of," Gilbert said. "She is so completely alone that it will be said I took advantage of her unprotected state to ask her hand."

"Not unprotected while I live," Mr. Acton said, warmly. "I was her uncle's friend, and I hold myself in some sort the guardian of her interests; and, as such, let me tell you, there is no one I would sooner see her marry than yourself. You were Mr. Hilton's choice, as well as the selection of her own heart."

"I know," said Gilbert, but——"

"A truce to all buts, my dear fellow; the game's your own; you have only to go in and win," Mr. Acton said.

"If I thought so——"

"Nonsense. I don't want any more of your thoughts about it. Take my advice and make sure. Come along."

And so saying, the lawyer took Gilbert's arm and they returned to the hotel. They found the ladies in a state of great wonderment at their sudden disappearance and extremely curious to know what important business could have called them both away. Nothing was said on the subject, however, till Madame Lanay rose, saying she would take her little girl home. Her father also wished to accompany her, being already weary of the quiet time he had spent with his daughter and her guests. He was very glad to see her again; but his mind, perverted and vitiated by a course of dissipation and unnatural and artificial life, craved strong excitement, and he was more wearied with the monotony of this one evening than he would have been with nights at the gambling table or ale house. Mr. Acton accompanied them to the door, and as he shook hands with Pauline, he said, in a low voice:—

"Return as soon as you can."

She nodded assent and departed.

He returned to the drawing-room and found Gilbert recounting to his mother and Blanche part of what has already been laid before the reader. Blanche looked pale and frightened.

"Have courage, Miss de Cressey," he said, "we shall outwit them yet."

"Perhaps so," she said; "but poor Pauline, what of her?"

"Your sister will do what is right, dear Miss de Cressey," he replied; "and we will leave the rest in higher hands than ours. You have not heard all."

Blanche and the widow listened in terror as Gilbert and Mr. Acton related what they knew of the career of Hubert Lannay. "There is nothing wanting now," said the latter, "but to find out when and where he assumed his present name."

"I can tell you that," Gilbert said.

"Well, and what is it?"

"I will tell you," Gilbert said, "before she returns," and he explained to his astonished hearers where he had been, and how he had found the information necessary to establish the whole proof of Hubert Lannay's former guilt. He had scarcely finished his story when Pauline rejoined them.

She was at first mush averse to proceeding to England with her sister, though very thankful to Blanche for taking her father and providing for him. "I would rather follow you," she said, in answer to their persuasions, when——"

"I understand you, dear Pauline," Blanche said, but you'd be better with us."

"Safer," added Mr. Acton.

After much persuasion she yielded, and the departure of the party was fixed for three days from that time, Mr. Acton promising to assist Pauline in arranging her affairs with her pupils. Pauline was undecided whether to acquaint Fanchette with the fact of the connection between them.

"I fear it would give her no pleasure," she said to Blanche.

"Oh, I'm sure it would," her sister said. "Do tell her, Pauline, she is very fond of you and little Therese."

"I think she is," Pauline answered, "but I don't know how much or how little to tell her of her wretched brother."

"Tell her just what your heart dictates," Gilbert said. "I know you will do it better than any of us."

"I will," said Pauline; "I will tell her to-night when I return."

The evening passed rapidly on in their discussion of plans for their journey and future proceedings, and it was late when Gilbert and Blanche accompanied Pauline to her humble home. They returned in a very silent mood, but there was something in Gilbert's face that prompted Mr. Acton to say to him when they were alone, after Blanche had retired:—

"Have I the honor of addressing the future master of Reardon?"

"I believe so," was the answer.

"Well, whenever it is, you have my heartiest good wishes," Mr. Acton said, kindly.

"I am sure of that," Gilbert said, and with a cordial "good night," they separated

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE JOURNEY—THE WELCOME—AT HOME—COME AT LAST.

Great was the astonishment of the simple hearted Fanchette on hearing that her lodger, whom she reverenced as a grand lady, was the wife of her lost brother. With a woman's quick instinct she guessed at the perpetrator of the outrage she so deplored, but she said nothing in reply to Pauline's somewhat hesitating avowal "that she had not seen her husband for a long time," and she embraced her new found sister, for whom she already felt a sister's love. Madame Lannay said nothing to her about what she knew of her husband's present plans and occupation.

"They may never hear of it," she said to herself, "and they never shall from me. They are happy now in their humble way, and why should I render them otherwise?"

Blanche made her appearance the next morning, and nearly turned Fanchette's brain by her kindness, or, as the simple blanchisseuse expressed it, "Mam'selle's condescension." She insisted on procuring a variety of comforts for the old man and his worthy daughter, but, with a wise delicacy of feeling, refrained from overwhelming them with presents unsuited to their sphere of life, which she felt they would not care to quit. But little preparation was needed, and the three days passed rapidly away. The summer sun shone brightly, and the many bells of Antwerp were merrily ringing, as they drove from their hotel to the steamer that lay alongside the picturesque old quay. It was a fete in the church, and they were often stopped by the crowds which followed in the wake of the spk ndid procession which was conveying the Sacred Host through the various streets of the city. Every face looked bright and happy, and Blanche remarked it.

"I trust it will be a happy omen," she said, as she looked out of the carriage window. "I love sunshine and bright faces."

"I hope so," Mr. Acton said. "We may be anticipating more evil than is coming."

Pauline said nothing, but her pale face grew paler still as she stepped on board the steamer, and thought of the last time she had looked upon that dancing water. Strangely enough, the Ostrich Wing was the boat chosen by Mr. Acton for their return voyage, and, though Captain Scott at once recognised in one of his lady passengers the face that had once so nearly floated to its death beneath his cabin window, he was too much of a gentleman to betray his knowledge, and it was not till Pauline herself advanced, and, offering him her hand, introduced him to her sister as her preserver, that he greeted her otherwise than by a silent bow. Their passage across was short and pleasant, very different from the trip which preceded the evening of Pauline's rescue, and the morning dawned clear and bright as the steamer entered the Thames, and steamed rapidly up the river.

"Now, fair ladies," Mr. Acton said, after they had discussed a comfortable meal and refreshed themselves, "what is to be our next move?"

"Whatever you think best," Blanche said. "Are we going on to-day?"

"Not if you would like a little sight-seeing," he replied. "There is no pressing reason for us to hurry on."

"I don't care to stay in London now," she said. "I should feel uncomfortable. I had rather be at Reardon."

"And I."

"And I," said Pauline and Mrs. Bertram, simultaneously,

"Carried by a majority," said Gilbert.

"So it appears," said Mr. Acton; "then we start as soon as possible."

"If you please," Blanche replied, and Walter, who in his heart was glad of her resolution, set about making preparations for starting.

Their journey to Plymouth, long and tedious as it is, passed pleasantly by, and, thanks to the telegraph, they were able to step into the comfortably appointed carriage sent to meet them by the housekeeper. If Blanche had had any doubts of the regard in which she was held by her tenantry, the reception of that night would have dispelled them. They were scarcely in sight of Reardon when a joyous shout rent the air, and the glare of a hundred torches illuminated the road along which they had to pass. Blanche had the carriage stopped, and the people pressed round, and hand after hand was stretched out to shake that of the young heiress, whose lovely face was lit up with pride and pleasure as she looked on the upturned faces of her welcoming tenantry. Their road lay past the gate of Gilbert's deserted home. No sign of life was there; the flowers hung their heads untended, and the closed shutters gave an air of mournful desolation that touched them all. Blanche's eyes filled with tears as she looked on it. Gilbert saw it and silently took the little hand that lay idly in her lap.

"She is happy now, dear Blanche," he whispered, pressing her hand.

"And sees that we are happy too," she answered in the same low tone. "Dear Marion."

Another joyous shout of welcome greeted the party as they entered the park, and Blanche's tears fell fast, with mingled feelings of happiness and regretful memory, as she silently bowed her acknowledgements. Mrs. Hicks was all smiles and fussy importance, as, with stately courtesy, she received the large party her young mistress had brought home with her at the hall door.

Mr. Acton was the first to alight, then the ladies, last of all Gilbert, who stepped into the spacious hall with a feeling of strange bewilderment. Blanche, returning the respectful greeting of her servants, waited till he had alighted and stood beside her, then, turning to him, she held out her hand.

"Welcome to Reardon," she said earnestly.

"Thank you," he said, in the same manner, but gravely, for a host of feelings came upon him at once, and he felt it was no time for words.

They entered the spacious dining-room in silence, and found a comfortable meal awaiting them. Blanche hesitated a moment, and then, with a blush and a smile, she motioned Gilbert to her uncle's old seat at the head of the table. He accepted the mute offer and seated himself. The servants understood the state of affairs in a moment, and great was the hubbub that ensued in the lower regions when the things were removed and they were enjoying their suppers over the comfortable fire.

"Well, I shouldn't have thought it," said one. "Miss Blanche marry a steward! Well, I never!"

"And not a young man either," put in another. "Look at his hair."

"Turning quite grey."

"He must be forty."

"Handsome, though,"

"Yes, but so old!"

Such were the remarks which passed round the table, as they discussed Gilbert and his appearance. Walter entered in the midst of it. He was immediately assailed on all sides with questions respecting the party his young mistress had brought back.

"Are they all going to live here?" was the inquiry from almost every one.

"Yes, all of them," he answered; "and as for our master that is to be, you will soon respect him as he deserves; he may be poor now, and he may be forty, as you observed just now, Miss Mary, but a better man never lived, and our Miss Blanche will have a good husband."

"She deserves one, God bless her!" said one of the men.

"Is Miss Blanche's sister a widow?" inquired the cook.

"You mind your own business—all of you," was Walter's somewhat gruff reply, for he hardly knew what to say.

"Oh, I suppose a kind of widow bewitched!" she answered, somewhat spitefully. "Of course she must be a widow. There's no husband, it seems, and she couldn't call herself Miss with that great child about."

The speaker was a new comer, and knew nothing of her mistress' sister or father.

"I tell you what," Walter said, "you mind your tongue a little better or you won't stop here. You'll see Madame Lannay's husband quite soon enough, I can tell you."

She was silenced, but the others were not.

"Oh, tell us about him!" some of them said. "Isn't he a forger, or a convict, or a murderer or something."

Walter was about to reply in the best manner he could, when the dining-room bell rang, and he made some excuse to answer it, glad to get away from their questions, and leaving them to their own surmises and conjectures.

"Well," said Mr. Acton to Gilbert, as they sat alone after the ladies had retired, "what do you think of your new home? Does Reardon suit you?"

"What do I think of it? I hardly know," he answered. "'Tis a splendid place, but I shall feel no right here till I have met this Lannay face to face, and crushed the plot he is hatching."

"We are prepared for them," was the answer, "and the sooner they come the better."

"I saw the gipsy Pharos among the crowd," Gilbert said, "at the Park gate, and some of the tribe, so he is not far off. I will seek him to-morrow."

"I don't suppose they will give us much time," Mr. Acton said.

"They are only making their last preparations in the way of dresses and so forth," Gilbert replied.

"They are getting up the farce very finely," the lawyer remarked; "but it won't go down; it will be received with disapprobation,' as the papers say."

"I wonder what will be the end of it," Gilbert said, musingly.

"No one can foresee," Mr. Acton replied. "If the law takes its course there can be but one end to it; but I cannot help thinking——"

"What?"

"That he will evade the law in some way or other."

"Impossible!" said Gilbert. "We have such proof of his guilt!"

"I know all that," Mr. Acton said, "but if I judge Hubert Lannay aright, he is such a desperate man that he will die rather than yield."

"That is a feeling I cannot understand," Gilbert returned. "The one death is as dishonorable as the other in my eyes."

"And in mine," replied his friend. "But we have got on an uncomfortable subject, I think. Let us drop it till daylight, at least."

"I think we had better," Gilbert answered, "it is rather dismal. I shall seek for Pharos to-morrow."

"Do," said Mr. Acton. "They must not find us unprepared."

The morrow came and passed, and day after day went by, and no sign of Lannay. The inmates of Reardon were settling down into a tranquil happiness, strange to most of them. Blanche was fast becoming the same gay, happy creature Gilbert first remembered her, and a faint color was returning to the pale cheek of her sister. The father was rapidly regaining strength, both of mind and body, and Mrs. Bertram was quietly settling into an unobtrusive sphere of gentle usefulness, which soon made itself felt through the house. Mrs. Hicks, at first, resolved in her own mind to resent what she deemed an infringement on her rights, but the widow's ministrations were so unassuming, and withal so useful, that she quickly became reconciled to her presence, and they were soon very good friends. Mr. Acton returned home, his wife receiving a general invitation to Reardon, for Blanche remembered her kindness with gratitude, and much respected the worthy lawyer's "Mary," as he always called her. The summer days were changing into autumn, and the corn on the many farms on the Reardon estate was already taking its golden tinge, and gipsy boys were bringing ripe nuts to the house for sale, ere anything occurred to disturb the tranquility of the household. Mr. Acton and Gilbert were out for a day's shooting with some of the neighboring gentry, for the lawyer was much respected, and Gilbert's stewardship was forgotten in the fact that he was a gentleman and an author, and though some were very ready to call him snob and parvenu, he was very generally respected. Blanche and Pauline were seated together in the low window of the drawing-room, the same window which overlooked the cottage of the Semplehurst steward and the wide expanse of Plymouth harbor. Mrs. Bertram was on the lawn with the two children and their nurse, whom she took under her special superintendence.

"What a lovely view," Pauline said.

"Is it not?" replied Blanche.

"I think it was the view that decided my poor uncle in buying the place. We had been all over the house, and he came to this window last, and after he had looked for some time he said:—'Blanche, I'll buy this place. I should like to die here.'"

"It is a lovely spot," her sister said. "I don't wonder at him."

"It looked just the same that day," said her sister, "as it does now. The same yellow corn over there changing color with every gust of wind, the same pretty garden yonder, the dancing blue waters with its thousand white sails gleaming like gems of light; the same glorious sunlight over everything."

"Did you know who lived there?" Pauline asked, inclining her head towards the cottage.

"He did not live there then," was her sister's answer. "If he had we should never have come."

"Strange," said Pauline, "how all things come about when you least expect."

"Strange indeed," her sister replied. "I little thought ever to be mistress here and he its master. My dear uncle would have been happy could he have lived to see it."

Their father had entered while they were speaking, and overheard most of their conversation.

"You deserve all your happiness, my child," he said. "You have been an angel to me."

"Oh, no, dear father," she said, kissing him. "Only just a happy girl who likes to see every one as happy as herself."

"But this munificence! This princely home that you have brought me to."

"Only my duty, dearest father," she returned.

"You would not have me in this great house with only Mrs. Hicks, would you? Why, we should have to leave most of it to the owls and bats, if you and Pauline and dear Mrs. Bertram had not taken pity on us."

He was about to make some reply, when a carriage was seen rapidly approaching along the drive.

"Some of your grand neighbors, dear child," he said. "I will go into the library."

"As you please, dear father," she replied. "Though I shall soon let my neighbors know that they must be your visitor as well as mine, or they won't find me at home."

Pauline rose hurriedly.

"Sit still, sister," Blanche said.

"No, no," Pauline replied. "I cannot bear the almost contemptuous manner with which most of your callers treat me."

"Oh, it's the way of the world," Blanche said, "and a very queer way it is. If they knew you it would be different."

"If they knew me it would be far worse," Pauline rejoined. "At present I am to them a nameless woman, a wife whose husband has never been heard of here; a mother, whose child never utters a father's name, and they slight me accordingly. What would it be, think you, if they knew the truth! Knew that I was the deserted wife of a proscribed felon. Will they not know it soon, think you?"

"I fear they will," was the thought of Blanche, but she did not utter it.

"Dear Pauline, you are too sensitive," she said. "It may not all be meant."

"Perhaps not," she replied; "but hearts that have been wrung like mine become, as you say, too sensitive."

She left the room as she spoke, and Blanche looked after her with a sigh.

"Poor Pauline," she said, "will she ever recover her spirits, I wonder?"

The carriage had reached the hall door by this time, and she looked out to see who her visitors were. The gentleman who slipped out first ran up the steps so quickly that she did not recognise him, an old gentleman followed who was quite a stranger to her, and lastly a young man, whose face struck familiarly and unpleasantly upon her mind. Where had she seen him before? She racked her memory in vain in the few moments that intervened between the strangers' arrival and the entrance of the servant with their cards. No; she could not remember him, and yet she was certain that it was familiar.

"Three gentlemen, ma'am," said the servant, entering.

"Where?" asked Blanche.

"In the breakfast parlor, miss," the man replied. "Their compliments, and they wish to see Miss de Cressey on business."

"My compliments, and I will be with them directly," Blanche replied, taking the cards from the salver.

The man bowed and withdrew, just as Blanche's eye caught the name on one of the cards she held:—

"HUBERT LANNAY, Union Hotel, Plymouth."

"At last!" For a moment her heart beat tumultuously, and she felt as if she must faint. It was but for a moment, and then her mind recovered its strength, and she could think what best to do. She looked at the two other cards:—

JOSIAH CLAYTON, Bushy Villa, Brixton."

"Surely I have heard my poor uncle mention that name," she said to herself. "What can that mean?"

"ANTHONY RUSHETT."

"Who's he, I wonder."

She rang the bell.

"Tell Mrs. Hicks to send refreshments into the breakfast parlor, and ask the gentlemen if they can stay to dinner. I fancy they are in no hurry."

"Yes, Miss."

"And send Walter to me."

"Yes, Miss."

Her faithful servant was soon in the room.

"Walter, they are come," she said.

"I know, Miss Blanche," he replied. "I saw them."

"Do you know Mr. Clayton?"

"I never saw him," he replied; "but I have often heard poor master speak of him. A very peculiar old gentleman, miss; wears black silk stockings and buckles to his shoes, and ties his hair in a pigtail, like a Chinaman."

"Exactly," said Blanche. "He is here too."

"He!" exclaimed Walter. "Well, master used to say he was such a worthy man. It seems strange he should be in league with Satan. Who's the other, Miss?"

"I don't know," she answered; "yet I know his face."

"So do I," Walter answered. "I am sure I do."

"What are you going to do, Miss Blanche?"

"Send for Mr. Acton and Mr. Bertram first thing," she answered, "and consult them. They will do what is best, I know."

The servant entered as she spoke, with the gentlemen's respects, and they would do themselves the honor of dining with Miss de Cressey.

"James," his mistress said, "take a horse and ride over to the Dingle Wood, and tell the gentlemen I shall be glad if they will return directly."

"Anything more, Miss?"

"Nothing," she replied. "Should they ask you anything you need only say Mons. Lannay has arrived."

"I will go directly, Miss," he answered.

"And you, Walter," Blanche said, "had better tell Mrs. Bertram who is here. I am sure she will not want to see him."

"You're not going to dine alone with them, are you?" Walter said in alarm.

"Oh, no," she replied; "I shall have Mr. Acton, and I will write a note to his wife and ask her to join us."

Once more alone, Blanche sat and thought. She felt very nervous at the thought of what was before her, though she did not know the full extent of the plot against her.

"This will never do," she said to herself, as she caught sight of her pale face in a mirror. "I must not be faint-hearted."

She knocked at her sister's door as she passed to her dressing-room.

"Oh, Blanche," said Pauline as she entered, "they are come."

"Yes, and I have invited them to dinner," her sister replied.

Pauline looked at her in amazement.

"I have sent for Gilbert and Mrs. Bertram," Blanche went on, "and now I am going to dress. I mean to let them see the heiress in state for once. Now, keep up your spirits; Mrs. Bertram will come and dine with you in my boudoir."

Blanche did dress, as none of her servants or her sister had ever seen her dress before. A splendid dress of pale blue brocade, trimmed with the rarest lace, was the dress she selected; and her matchless golden hair was partly confined, partly crowned, by a tiara of superb diamonds. Her arms and neck glittered with the same costly gems, and, instead of the simple, girlish figure that Lannay so well remembered, he was greeted by a self-possessed, elegant woman, whose matchless beauty and queen-like bearing accorded well with the magnificence with which she was surrounded. Lannay was, for a moment, taken by surprise as Blanche advanced into the room and returned his greeting with a dignified air. He was not prepared for it; he remembered the tremulous shyness with which she used to greet her male guests, and the change astonished him. Mr. Acton accompanied her, and, in duty bound, was civil to the guests of his hostess—but that was all, more he could not be, and he wondered, as Blanche had done, who the young gentleman could be; he had never seen him before, that he was sure of. The dinner passed silently and stiffly over, the antagonistic parties each watching the slightest move on the part of the others. Mr. Rushet was evidently unused to polite society, and made sundry mistakes, to the chagrin of Lannay, who strove to direct the attention of his hostess from his companion, whose manners were, to say the least, peculiar. Worthy Mr. Acton had obeyed the sudden summons with considerable trepidation. She was very fond of Blanche, and enjoyed nothing better than the tete a tete dinners she had often been invited to share with the young lady, but these formal parties scared her, and she did not appear to advantage. At any other time Lannay would have seized on the worthy lady's peculiarities and ridiculed them in the sarcastic style he so well knew how to use, but he had too much at stake now, and he simply entered into the conversation that arose without taking any prominent part. Dinner over, the ladies rose to retire, leaving the gentlemen to their wine. Mr. Acton held the door open for his wife and Blanche to pass out.

"Courage!" he whispered, as she passed him. "All will be well."

She gave him a grateful look as she left the room, and he returned to his seat. It seemed a long time to her, the interval that ensued between their leaving the gentlemen and being joined by them in the drawing room, and the nerves of Blanche were on the rack. Mrs. Acton, of course, knew nothing of what was passing around her, and her common-place chatter jarred on Blanche's over wrought feelings, till she felt quite bewildered. She rang for coffee, at length, from sheer lack of something to do. On the tray came a little note.

"From Mr. Bertram, Miss," the servant politely said.

"Excuse me," she said to Mrs. Acton, and opened the little missive.

The contents were very brief.

"I am here, dear Blanche, and prepared for anything; show no fear, and all will be right."

The very fact of his presence seemed a protection, and she heard the dining-room door open, and the gentlemen coming up, with less trepidation than she imagined she should feel. Coffee was handed round, Lannay and his companions gaining confidence every moment. There was no sign of trepidation in Blanche's face. She was somewhat dignified, it is true, but appeared quite at her ease; while Mr. Acton chatted and talked familiarly on the current topics of the day in an easy, cheery manner. The servants dismissed and the lamps lighted, they turned from the windows, about which they had been standing. Blanche, in obedience to a look from the lawyer, said quietly:—

"And now, gentlemen, your business with me?"

There was no trembling in the clear voice that put the question, and, for a moment, no one answered it.

"I came on very particular business, Miss de Cressey," Lannay said; "but your unexpected hospitality for a time has driven it out of my thoughts."

"Pray recall it," she said, with a slight degree of satire in her tone; "I should like to know what induced Mons. Lannay to honor my house with a visit?"

"The honor is mine," he replied, "and would be still more an honor were we not here on an errand which will, I fear, prove a painful one to you."

"Indeed," was all Blanche could say.

"I am afraid so," he returned. "Can I see you alone for a few minutes?"

"You can have no business with me that this gentleman may not hear," she replied, somewhat stiffly. "He knows all my business affairs."

Lannay was somewhat disconcerted. He had not bargained for anything like opposition on the part of Blanche.

She was resolute, however, and there was nothing to be done but make the best of it.

"My dear young lady," began Mr. Josiah Clayton, we are here on an errand as painful to ourselves as I fear it will be to you."

Blanche started. The voice was that of an aged man, yet beneath its tremulous tones there was a strangely familiar sound.

"Mr. Acton smiled slightly, and the gentleman went on:—

"You are the niece of Mr. Acton?"

Blanche bowed.

"His sister's daughter and supposed heiress, I presume?"

"Presume, sir!" said Mr. Acton. "That is a singular word to use. Every one knows that Miss de Cressey is her uncle's heiress. My old friend took good care of that."

"Pardon me, sir," the old gentleman observed, "I spoke advisedly. I can say 'my old friend' in speaking of the deceased relative of this dear young lady as well as you can, and I am perfectly aware that he bequeathed his immense fortune to her, but there were conditions, sir—there were conditions."

"Conditions!" exclaimed Mr. Acton, "it was entirely unconditional, not a word in the will binding her in any way whatever."

"I think you are mistaken," the other replied. "I will convince you."

"That you cannot do," the lawyer said, gravely, rising and going to a massive cabinet, which stood in a recess between two of the windows, and opening a drawer.

The scene in that splendid drawing-room was a somewhat singular one. The soft light from the many lamps fell on the jewels worn by Blanche, who stood somewhat in the shade, and made these shine and sparkle about her like fire drops. The three gentlemen sat at the centre table, in the full glare of the light, Lannay, ever and anon, rapping impatiently upon it with the hand which bore the splendid diamond he constantly wore, and the action made it seem to send forth fiery sparks at every jerk. Mr. Arthur Rushet sat perfectly still and never uttered a word. Mr. Josiah Clayton did the same, though there was a restless twinkle in his black eyes, which, but for his glasses, would have been very perceptible. He sat bolt upright, with his clasped hands resting upon the table, the very personification of respectability.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The knight he fixed upon her
His cold and glossy eye,
His cheek was pale and haggard
And his pulse beat quick and high;
He laid aside his armor,
His helmet and his plume,
And strode with a weak, uncertain step
Up and down the darkened room.

His breast heaved with emotion,
As though his breast was broke,
At length his thin lips parted
And slowly and sad he spoke:—
"I' faith, my good dame Margarette,
Tell that to the marines—
I'm hungry and dry—bring a flagon of beer
And a platter of pork and beans."

J. H. B.

THE ACTOR'S DAUGHTER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY CHAS. E. NEWTON.

"Are we nearly home, my dear?" The speaker, Seth Warton, was an old man, blind and infirm. In every wrinkle of his attenuate features care and poverty were discernible. He had been an actor, but when in the very zenith of success, a cruel blow—the premature discharge of a pistol—had robbed him of his sight. Following this terrible calamity came other misfortunes—his wife's death and heavy pecuniary losses. Those who once admired his genius had long since forgotten his name, and for years sickness and poverty had been his constant attendants. Beside him walked a girl scantily and poorly clad—as wretched in appearance as himself. She was young, just budding into womanhood, and yet care and sorrow had already furrowed her brow.

"Are you weary, father? If so, lean on me," and she placed her thin, half bare arm round the old man's waist. Alice Warton possessed but little beauty—she was too tall and slender—her features were pale and sharp, and her great black eyes deeply sunken. Yet her face was one not easily forgotten. There was a something strangely fascinating in those large, melancholy eyes, and as she looked wistfully into the store windows—brightly illuminated and filled with those useless and costly wares that please the rich, but only remind the poor more keenly of their poverty—a solitary tear rolled down her pallid cheek. It was a sad sight to look upon, this old man supported by his weak child, moving with tottering steps slowly through the busy crowd. They had proceeded but a short distance, when the blind man paused. His weak and trembling limbs refused to bear him further.

"My child," he faintly said, "I fear I have not strength to go—I——" but his voice failed him and he sank down unconscious at his daughter's feet. Almost crazed with fear, the poor child fell upon her knees at her father's side.

"Father, father," she cried, "speak to me—tell me you are not dead. Oh, what shall I do!—what shall I do!" and, throwing herself upon her father's breast, she gave vent to her agony in tears.

"My child, what has happened? Tell me"—a strong arm raised her to her feet, and a gloved hand tenderly brushed from her eyes the tears.

Alice looked up into the face of the stranger—it was kind and good-natured, and wore an expression of pity.

"My father, sir—tell me, is he dead?"

"The stranger stooped, and, placing his hand upon the old man's breast, replied:—"No, my child, but I fear that he is very ill. He is your father?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you live far from here?" he asked.

"Not far, sir; our house is in D——st. No. 9.

"A carriage must be called, and the old gentleman taken home." So saying, he hailed a passing coach, and, with the assistance of the driver, carefully placed the old man therein, and when Alice had recovered her scattered senses she found herself seated in the carriage beside the stranger, rolling rapidly toward her home. The apartment into which Seth Warton was carried was situated on the top floor of a miserable tenement house. An old cot, with a scarcity of bedding, two broken chairs, a table and a rusty stove, constituted its furniture. Upon the cot the old man was placed, and a physician immediately summoned, who, after hours of exertion, succeeded in restoring some signs of returning life in the old actor's inducing some signs of returning life in the old actor's insensate form, and when everything had been done to relieve his sufferings, George Carlisle, for such was the stranger's name, seating himself near the stove, called Alice to his side, and asked, "How long have you lived in this wretched place?"

"Very near two years, sir," replied she.

"And have you always been so poor?"

"Oh no sir, not always," and as her memory reverted to the past, tears sprang to her eyes.

"Tell me," said George, kindly, "what wrought this change?"

"Ah, sir, it is a sad story, but if you desire me to I'll tell it. It is about eight years since my father lost his eyes. He used to be an actor, and one night, when on the stage, a pistol was accidentally discharged in his face. Since that time he has never seen the light of day. Those who professed friendship and courted his society when success crowned his efforts soon cast him off when misfortune crossed his path. With his fast failing health came cruel poverty. My mother bore her burden without a murmur, but death soon severed the link that bound her to misery, and what had been her load fell heavily on my shoulders. In vain I strove to gain a livelihood for father and myself. Yesterday we spent our last cent. The manager of the ——Theatre and my father were years ago what is termed 'friends,' and it was with the hope of my obtaining an engagement in the ballet at the theatre that father and I went out this evening—but now that he is stricken down what can I do?" and, burying her face in her hands, she wept bitterly.

The heart of George Carlisle was touched and yearned for this poor, friendless child, and, drawing her gently to him, he kindly said, "Have no fear, my child, your father's case is not so dangerous. Good care and nourishment will soon bring him around again, and when he is sufficiently recovered he shall be removed to more comfortable apartments; so cheer up—you shall want for nothing." George Carlisle was the only son of wealthy parents, who, dying, left him at an early age an orphan, possessed of a handsome fortune. He had seen much of the world, but poverty was to him a stranger. He had read of privation and want, but had never experienced their slightest pangs. When chance threw into his path this old blind man and his daughter he felt that it was the work of Providence, and that he had a mission to perform.

He spent less time at his club, and every day passed hours beside the sick man's couch, anxiously watching his slowly returning strength. He furnished him with every little delicacy that could be obtained, and even engaged a nurse to wait on him. When the winter had passed away Seth Warton was so much improved that the doctor consented to his being removed to more cheerful and comfortable apartments—the second floor of a pleasant little cottage in the upper part of the city, which George had engaged and furnished, and here he daily passed his leisure hours, reading to the blind man, or listening to some favorite air sung by Alice while engaged in her household duties.

Spring passed away—summer ripened into autumn, with its falling leaves and hazy sky, and a great change was noticeable in Seth Warton. His life was gradually ebbing away. The physician exercised his skill in vain. The blind actor was soon beyond the reach of human aid, and one chill morning in October his spirit passed into eternity. The blow was a heavy one for poor Alice, but in her bereavement she still found George Carlisle a true and sincere friend, ever ready with a word of comfort and a helping hand. Calling one evening, he found Alice sadly gazing from her window, her long eyes bathed in tears.

"Why are you so sad?" he gently asked, taking her hand in his.

"I was thinking of the past," she replied.

"My child," said George, tenderly, "this constant brooding will impair your health. You need a change of air and scene. It is necessary that you should have pure country air to revive your spirits."

That night he wrote a long letter to his maiden sister, who lived at N——, a beautiful village a few miles from the city, in which he asked that she would undertake the care of this friendless orphan, and a week after Alice Warton found a home in the house of Susan Carlisle, at N——.

When three years had passed one would scarcely have recognized Alice Warton, so changed was she. That poor, friendless girl, destitute of everything calculated to make life happy, had become a beautiful woman. Her cheeks, no longer wan and thin, were tinged with health's richest hue, and from the depths of those large, dreamy eyes, sparkled new life and hope. The outlines of that form, once slender and awkward, were now round and graceful. Her mind and gentle disposition had gained her the love and respect of all in whose society she had been thrown. Nor had George Carlisle been blind to her charms, for each passing day seemed to add a brighter lustre to her natural grace and beauty, and suddenly this man of five and thirty awoke to the realization that he was in love with his ward. He endeavored to convince himself of the folly of his passion, but in vain, for with a lover's quick perception he saw that she reciprocated his affection. After Alice's departure from the city he became strangely dissatisfied with his boarding place, and disgusted with city life, so he prevailed on his sister to allow him also to become a member of her household. But he was not a man that could contentedly settle down in idleness, so, when the delightful days of summer were gone, he began to tire of the monotony of country life, and seek occupation. At last he received an excellent offer, and, availing himself of it, became a junior partner in an importing house in the city. One evening, when he returned from business, Alice noticed that his face wore a graver expression than she had ever seen it before. Like a true hearted woman she sympathized with the man she loved. The darkness on his face cast its shadows on her heart. After tea was dispensed of, she sought George, who, contrary to his usual custom, moodily sauntered off alone to a little rustic summer-house some distance from the cottage. There she found him in a deep reverie, and it was not until she spoke that he was aware of her presence.

"George!" He started and looked up, and, laying her hand gently on his shoulder, she said: "I have been seeking you since tea. What is it that troubles you, George?"

"Nothing, Alice," and a forced smile passed over his countenance. "Why do you ask me this?"

"Because I know that something worries you. I can see it in your face. Will you not tell what it is?"

His eyes fell to the ground, and for a moment he seemed lost in thought; then, looking up into her anxious face, he slowly said:—

"Alice, I am going away next week."

"Away!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, the Parisian branch of our house has become somewhat involved—there is evidently something wrong there, and it is necessary that one of the firm should go and investigate matters."

"But, George—" A choking sensation prevented her further utterance, and, taking her hand in his, he continued:—

"But before going, Alice, I wish to—to—. Forgive me if what I say causes you pain—it springs from my heart, and I can't keep it back. I am much older than you, I know, but when my eyes first beheld your face I loved you. For three years I have striven in vain to drive this passion from my heart, but I can bear the torture no longer. Will you consent to become my wife?"

She raised her swimming eyes for a moment to his—a sob alone escaped her lips, but George Carlisle read his answer in her eyes. A week after he sailed for Europe, and when Alice, with a heavy heart, bid him farewell, a diamond glistened on her engagement finger, for she was his affianced bride.

* * * * * * *

George had been absent two months—it seemed to Alice as if it were two years. She grew nervous and fretful. Her only pleasure was in reading his letters over and over again, or passing hours in some favorite resort, picturing with her imagination his return. At last she received a letter from him, in which he announced his intention to return with the steamer Eagle, and closed by saying that she might expect to see him about November first. She was now all impatience for the time to pass away. The last days of October were slowly slipping by and November was at hand. She was one morning seated before a glowing fire in the library—for the weather was rather sharp—dreaming as usual of George and the happiness in store for her, when the housemaid handed her the morning paper. She took it from the girl's hand and carelessly glanced at it. Seeing nothing in it of interest, she was about to throw it down, when her eye fell upon the heading of a column. Great heaven! What did she see? "Burning of the Steamship Eagle—Loss of all on board." She read no more—a mist seemed to pass before her eyes, and she fell in a deadly swoon. When Susan Carlisle entered the library, an hour after, she found Alice laying senseless upon the floor.

* * * * * * *

For months Alice Warton lay upon a bed of sickness, burning with fever and raging with delirium. The physician's efforts and Susan Carlisle's watchful care were of no avail. Her reason never returned, and one night death relieved her of her suffering, and the spirit of this pure and lovely girl passed quietly away to the bosom of its God. There was many a sad heart and tearful eye in N—— when it was known that Alice Warton was no more, and when they bore her body to the village churchyard sorrow was discernible on every face that made up that solemn train. As the procession neared the church a solitary man was seen entering the village of N——. His face was thin and weatherbeaten and partially covered with a heavy, shaggy beard. He looked neither to the right nor left, but walked briskly on, as if anxious to reach his journey's end. As he approached the church, the doleful tolling of the bell attracted his attention, and, looking up, his eyes encountered the funeral proc

BILLIARD PLAYER, Allegheny City, Pa.—The Experts' Game of billiards is played with four balls, one blue, two red and the other the one half white. Counts are made either by a "follow" (the object balls must, however, be at least ten inches apart), a "force," a "kiss," a cannon or by taking a cushion. "Kiss" shots must be called beforehand, the count, as also must double shots, which count three points when made. If a double carom is called, and only two balls are struck, it counts nothing. Each single carom counts one. The player loses nothing by going into a pocket or off the table unless he has made no count. In that case he forfeits one. The player also forfeits a point for every innings in which he fails to make at least one point. The blue ball goes on the pool spot at the foot of the table. The player, when in hand, may place his ball anywhere on the string line and play at any ball on the table, even though it should be inside.

C. S. S.—The destruction of the Olympic Theatre, London, Eng., by fire, took place March 30th, 1849. The house was built during the reign of George III. Old Philip Astley, at the time the Amphitheatre in Lambeth was destroyed by fire, applied to the King to give him the timber of a man-of-war to build a theatre with. Old Astley being a favorite with his Majesty, he having rendered some service to the state at the time of the French war, the King gave him the old ship called "La Ville de Paris," in which William IV went out as midshipman. Out of the timber of this ship the theatre was erected, and on its completion his Majesty presented old Astley with a splendid chandelier. The mast of the vessel formed the flies, and they withstood the fire until after the roof fell in. So our record stands.

O. ENGLAND, Hermitage, Pa.—1. If a ball be held from the bat before touching the ground or any other object except the person of a player the striker is out, no matter if the ball be dropped by one player and caught by another before it touches the ground. The catch is made if the ball is held at all, no matter if by the arms or on the lap of the fielder or even on his feet, so long as it does not first touch the ground. 2. No "foul strikes" can be called if the batsman has his feet one on each side of the line of the home base. 3. Even if the games between the Atlantics and the Athletics were regular games, yet the Athletics are not champions, as the first game was null and void.

TROY B. MACKINLEY, Ottawa, Ill.—1. "If a base runner be on the base, and, another on the 3d, and the latter runs to 3d while the former tries to get home, which is out in case the player running home returns to 3d and holds the base, while the player running from 1st to 2d stays on 2d and holds it, and both are touched while on the base?"——1. The player running to 3d from 2d is the player out, he having no right to the 3d until the player who left it had touched home base. 2. No "ball" can be called on the first ball delivered, no matter how far or wide it reach it may be pitched wildly it helps to make the repetition alluded to in the rules, wherein it says:—"Should the pitcher repeatedly, etc.

FOUNDAC, Washington, D. C.—The first match of the series between the National and Olympics was won by the latter by a score of 4 to 2. The second resulted in the success of the Olympics by a score of 15 to 8, and the deciding game, played June 24th, was won by the Nationals, 23 to 10. This decides championship of the District of Columbia in favor of the Nationals. The three were "practice" games, however, they are "null and void" as settling the question; but if regular games, no future contests this season can be regularly played or any "championship" claimed. The first game next season will probably remain in England some time.

W. S., Newark, N. J.—The number of cards to be dealt at cribbage does not rest with the game, but is a matter to be settled by mutual agreement. If the five-card, then the dealer must give five cards each; if the six-card, then six cards; but always one at a time.

JOHNNY OF CHICAGO.—At cribbage, the cards having been played as follows:—3, 4, 5, 3, 4, 2, 5, 6, 4, B is not entitled to a sequence for the last four, because the four previously played shuts out the tray. He was only entitled to one point for last card. All the other sequences are correct as scored.

LONE STAR, New Orleans.—1. Any movement made by the pitcher to deliver the ball, whether he has the ball in the hand moved forward or in the act of so doing, is a "delivery," he under sixty days.

To inquire. The Louisiana State Association should apply for probationary membership.

H. RUSSENBERGER, St. Louis.—1. The Cincinnati Club visited St. Louis in 1868 and 1869, but not with the same nine. 2. Send future issues of the CLIPPER for the announcement of matches to be played. 3. Send us your items, but be brief. 4. Direct to the Binghampton post office, or to this office.

C. D. WILSON, Quincy.—No man who is a member of a senior or junior club, or who has played in a regular match game whether as a member or not, can play in a regular match game as a member of another club until he has ceased to be a member of the club he last played with in a match game.

BUCK SHOT.—1. Dan Setchell has been dead some years. He was lost at sea on a voyage from San Francisco to New Zealand. 2. His first write was as actor. He was not known upon the stage some years before he met her. 3. She left one child—a girl. 4. The brother to whom you refer is at present the treasurer of Booth's Theatre.

S. S. S., Providence, R. I.—1. If the bet was on the offer as it appeared in your columns, then otherwise you do not win unless the bet is a draw. 2. Edwards' weight was 120¾. 3. Edwards has not signed himself Light-Weight Champion in these columns since his last fight with Coulyer.

K. D., Washington, D. C.—The shell ought to allow the gig eighteen seconds per mile, or fifty-four seconds in a three-mile race. The carrying a coxswain is not handicapped, it being optional with the crew.

LOCUSTER, Philadelphia.—But one game was played in Philadelphia in 1869 between the Athletics and Cincinnati Club, and that was won by the Red Stockings by a score of 27 to 18. It was played June 27th.

CHERRY, New York.—We do not think the return match between the Atlantic and Cincinnat clubs will be played until September, when the Atlantics will make a grand championship tour; for they are now still in splendid condition.

VIVA C., Augusta, Georgia.—The "Red Stockings" were not defeated before 1868, as it was in that year that they adopted the dress and name of Red Stockings. They were defeated more than three times in 1868, however.

CLIPPER READER.—You ask a strange question for a reader of our paper. The Athletics claim it was a regular match, the Atlantics that it was the reverse. We have but little doubt about its being a practice match.

H. SMITH, Quebec, C.—It is quite possible that the gentleman you name may have been with Alf. Burnett during his trip through Canada, as at that time his regular agent, Mr. Rich, was suddenly called home by sickness in his family.

ROSCITA, Chicago, Ill.—If you are desirous of going upon the stage, seek an interview with one of the managers in your city; state your case to him frankly and ask for an engagement for utility. They will give you good advice.

BOB, Boston.—"A boy in trial a horse trots outside of two minutes and nineteen seconds (3m. 19sec.) B bets if the horse trots in precisely two minutes and nineteen seconds that he, B, wins the money. Who wins the bet?" B wins.

J. B. H., Brockville, Ont.—1. Dexter was owned by Mr. George Fawcett at the time he trotted against Ethan Allen and running mate. 2. Mr. Bonner purchased Dexter on the 14th August, 1867. 3. He has never trotted for stakes since Mr. Bonner owned him.

E. D. F., Boston.—1. Goldsmith Maid's fastest three heats were made at Buffalo in August, 1870, 2:19¾; 2:19¾; 2:19¾. 2. George Palmer's fastest third heat was against Lady Thorn, Goldsmith Maid and American Girl, at Goldsmith, July 5, 2:19¾.

HERSHAW, Chicago.—1. If the Zavistowski sisters appear in Chicago next season it will be duly announced. 2. Write to Gurney, photographer, 7 Bond street. You can only obtain autographs of prominent professionals by application to them personally.

J. B. H., Fair Haven, Ct.—"Hoyle" is not recognized as authority in full now, because of the many alterations in rules and the number of new games played since its original publication. The CLIPPER is the only standard organ in this country.

PONY JOE, Pittsburgh.—A, having made his one point with Jack, goes out before B's high, low, game. B must make his three points before A makes one to win, and Jack scores out before game.

JO. H. FA., Cincinnati, O.—1. A party throwing five of a kind is not responsible for a treat for the party. 2. Your partner, having made the trump, can play a 4 one, but you cannot do so.

GENERAL REYNOLDS, St. Thomas, Ont.—1. The Derby distance is one mile and a half. 2. Kingcraft won the Derby this year in 2min. 55sec.

JACK CAVENLEY.—Four aces beat a straight flush, unless specially agreed upon that the latter is the winning hand before commencing the game.

DUNCE HAND.—1. In case of two straights, the winning hand must be decided by the highest card held. 2. You cannot get a copy of the burlesque.

"SHE WOULD BE AN ACTRESS."—Edwin Booth was married to Miss Mary Devlin, now deceased, prior to his marriage with Miss Mary McVicker.

CONSTANT READER, La Grange.—A, B and C throw off to see which takes the first choice; the two losers then throw off for the third choice, it taking second choice.

C. E. COLLINS.—Mlle Schneider made her first appearance in London, Eng., on the 22d of June, 1868, as the Duchesse, in the "Grand Duc-besse de Gerolstein."

D. G., Copake, N. Y.—B is only entitled to a share of the winnings in proportion to the money he put up. His proportion of the $18 bet is consequently $6, and his partner's $6.

H. M. LUCAS, Ont.—No trotting horse has a record of 2:16 on the American turf. American Girl's first time is 2:19; Lady Thorn's 2:19¾; Goldsmith Maid's 2:19¾, and Dexter's 2:17¾.

STERKHOLDER, Allegheny City.—A loses the $5. The meaning of the proposition A made was that A would play and beat B a game of billiards for $5. A's claim to the money is simply ridiculous.

REVERE, Chicago.—You bet that the Forest City nine would beat the Olympics. They did beat them, and you therefore won your bet.

CLIPPER, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Apply at the counting room of any daily paper in your city.

J. A. ANDERSON, Hamilton, Ontario.—Song and dance men receive from $40 to $100 a week, according to their popularity and artistic ability.

CONSTANT READER, Hillsgrove.—We cannot give the address of Mr. E. L. Heard, veterinary surgeon. Perhaps some of our readers can.

C. W. B., Alton, Ill.—1. The commission is three per cent. on the winnings. 2. C can build or his partner without having a cent on his hand. 3. A player can build more than one pile, if he chooses.

C. M. B., Norwich, Conn.—1. The player can build a second pile without taking up the first. 2. The penalty of a misdeal is the loss of the game.

J. D. M.—In order to get employment in the wardrobe department of a theatre, apply at the stage door and inquire for the person in charge of the wardrobe.

MISS H. B. J., Baltimore.—The gentleman does not occupy a sufficiently prominent professional position for us to reply to your queries.

M. L.—Both are good, but as to which is the better comedian is merely a matter of opinion, and therefore not in the range of response in the CLIPPER.

S. M. W., Albany, N. Y.—1. Wm. Woods' work, entitled "Physical Exercises," contains a treatise on training for rowing as well as other races. You can obtain it by addressing Ed. James, as directed by his advertisement in another column. 2. No.

TOM.—1. Mr. George Coes is gradually improving in health. 2. Kitty Pyfe appeared on the stage in New York on several occasions. 3. Miss Albertine died some years since.

STAGE STRUCK BARNEY, Baltimore.—If you have the talent to make success upon the stage, the height you mention need not interfere.

LARAMIE.—Lady Palmer and Flathush Maid, driven to road wagon by Mr. Bonner in 1867, trotted one mile in 2:26, and two miles in 5:01¼; the second quarter of the second mile in 33 seconds.

PEORIA, Ill.—Bashaw Jr., has never trotted a full mile in the state of Iowa or any other state in 2:22.

W. C., Johnstown, Pa.—We do not know of any Shetland ponies for sale in this city just now.

W. W., Chicago, Ill.—Unless the bet was made play or pay it is a draw.

JOHN AND LOUIS P.—Cincinnati.—The average of your figures is a little over 4min. Sec. to the mile.

C. H. C., Philadelphia.—Circumstances alter cases, but in the majority of instances the Misses Doerr would be proper.

FOURTH LIGHTER.—There does not appear to have been any public recruiting office for the Kneeline's army in this city.

VIDOCQ.—1. Read Ed. James' advertisement in another column. 2. A sad state of affairs, truly.

JNO. C. STROUP, Philadelphia.—It takes some time to engrave the cut. It will appear in the next issue.

YORKVILLE RUNNER.—We have no authentic information upon the subject.

GULLEY, Louisville, Ky.—The fastest 100 yards time on record is 9¾ seconds, made by George Seward.

ORSER, Hartford, Conn.—Not adapted to the CLIPPER. None the less obliged to you, however, for the information.

STUCKSTHEMUD.—See Ed. James' advertisement in another column.

JAS. H., Troy, N. Y.—Mace was defeated by Bob Brettle and Tom King.

W. BURNS, Indianapolis, Ind.—Write to McCoole for the desired information; we are unable to state positively.

C. B. LEAR, Steubenville, O.—Consult the boss canvasman of the first circus that visits your town.

C. H. G., 8s em, Mass.—Too old for publication, except the one that appears.

A. B. C., Brooklyn.—As B weighed 100 lbs. and more, B won the bet.

E.—There is a race annually run at Epsom called the Epsom Stakes for four year olds, but it is not of much importance.

P. H.—At poker the ace counts both ways as a sequence. The ten, Jack, queen, king and ace is the highest straight that can be held.

BOWIE, Woodstock.—Revolver carried his full weight when he ran a mile in 1:44¼, May 30th, 1866.

G. W. GATES, Chicago.—Yes; they were defeated by the Atlantics twice in 1869, as well as by several other clubs the same year.

CONSTANT READER.—Zettlein never played with the Mutuals, nor was he ever a member of that club.

B. H., Cuba, Ill.—We did not receive the report alluded to, if it was not published. Thank you for attention.

CAPTAIN, Boston.—The Lowells. The smaller the score the better the game, as a general rule.

J. B. W., Wooster, O.—Heenan and Sayers fought on the 17th of April, 1860.

R. H., Washington, D. C.—That is a secret possessed by trainers which we cannot divulge.

SPORT, Albany, N. Y.—1. Ed. Price was born in London, Eng. 2. About 16 years.

BALLER (?), Boston.—Write to Shannon, Miller & Crane, 46 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

JAY EYE, New Haven, Conn.—1. He is not the same Welch who seconded Sayers. 2. We believe he fought once or twice.

M. N., Gettysburg, N. Y.—Billy Edwards defeated Sam Collyer twice in the prize ring.

ARDENT ADMIRER.—The Atlantics played the Athletics in Philadelphia, Oct. 26th, 1869, and won by a score of 37 to 17.

JAMESTOWN.—Henrietta, Fleetwing and Veata, the former win ring.

F. W., St. Louis.—No; you cannot go alone under such circumstances.

JOE.—The man may shuffle, but the dealer must have the last shuffle.

JNO. C. L., Mount Holly.—That is something which we cannot divulge.

SAM, Monigomery, Ala.—Will give it a place as soon as space will permit.

F. T., Columbia, Mo.—We do not wish to make such arrangement at present.

O. McC., Chicago.—The fastest mile time by a running horse was 1:43¾, made by Herzog.

BALTIMORE, Md.—We cannot recommend you anything to dye your pistol-balls of a copper color.

J. D., Hartsville.—Wash the dog well with carbolic soap, which you can obtain at any druggist's.

BOB, Boston.—A loses. If a horse trots in 2:19, how can he be said to trot outside of that time?

CONSTANT READER, Galesburg.—The game being declared a draw by mutual consent, the bet is off.

A. G., San Francisco, Cal.—We cannot make room for scores except in cases of important games.

AGILE, West Philadelphia.—Lydia Thompson is in California, and will not soon appear in Philadelphia.

B., Youngstown.—Your favor is to hand, giving an account of a performance on June 24th, in a little state.

F. C., Toledo.—The fastest even mile time in this country was made by Herzog at Cincinnati in May, 1869.

LAWRENCE.—The party who bet that three minutes would win the race, loses, because the time was more than three minutes.

EUREKA, Baltimore.—Fox's new theatre in Philadelphia is not sufficiently advanced to tell what kind of a structure it will be.

C. H. G., Steubenville, O.—Consult the boss canvasman of the first circus that visits your town.

C. H. G., 8s em, Mass.—Too old for publication, except the one that appears.

A. B. C., Brooklyn.—As B weighed 100 lbs. and more, B won the bet.

E.—There is a race annually run at Epsom called the Epsom Stakes for four year olds, but it is not of much importance.

P. H.—At poker the ace counts both ways as a sequence. The ten, Jack, queen, king and ace is the highest straight that can be held.

BOWIE, Woodstock.—Revolver carried his full weight when he ran a mile in 1:44¼, May 30th, 1866.

G. W. GATES, Chicago.—Yes; they were defeated by the Atlantics twice in 1869, as well as by several other clubs the same year.

CONSTANT READER.—Zettlein never played with the Mutuals, nor was he ever a member of that club.

B. H., Cuba, Ill.—We did not receive the report alluded to, if it was not published. Thank you for attention.

CAPTAIN, Boston.—The Lowells. The smaller the score the better the game, as a general rule.

J. B. W., Wooster, O.—Heenan and Sayers fought on the 17th of April, 1860.

R. H., Washington, D. C.—That is a secret possessed by trainers which we cannot divulge.

SPORT, Albany, N. Y.—1. Ed. Price was born in London, Eng. 2. About 16 years.

BALLER (?), Boston.—Write to Shannon, Miller & Crane, 46 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

JAY EYE, New Haven, Conn.—1. He is not the same Welch who seconded Sayers. 2. We believe he fought once or twice.

M. N., Gettysburg, N. Y.—Billy Edwards defeated Sam Collyer twice in the prize ring.

ARDENT ADMIRER.—The Atlantics played the Athletics in Philadelphia, Oct. 26th, 1869, and won by a score of 37 to 17.

JAMESTOWN.—Henrietta, Fleetwing and Veata, the former win ring.

F. W., St. Louis.—No; you cannot go alone under such circumstances.

JOE.—The man may shuffle, but the dealer must have the last shuffle.

JNO. C. L., Mount Holly.—That is something which we cannot divulge.

SAM, Monigomery, Ala.—Will give it a place as soon as space will permit.

F. T., Columbia, Mo.—We do not wish to make such arrangement at present.

O. McC., Chicago.—The fastest mile time by a running horse was 1:43¾, made by Herzog.

BALTIMORE, Md.—We cannot recommend you anything to dye your pistol-balls of a copper color.

J. D., Hartsville.—Wash the dog well with carbolic soap, which you can obtain at any druggist's.

BOB, Boston.—A loses. If a horse trots in 2:19, how can he be said to trot outside of that time?

CONSTANT READER, Galesburg.—The game being declared a draw by mutual consent, the bet is off.

A. G., San Francisco, Cal.—We cannot make room for scores except in cases of important games.

AGILE, West Philadelphia.—Lydia Thompson is in California, and will not soon appear in Philadelphia.

B., Youngstown.—Your favor is to hand, giving an account of a performance on June 24th, in a little state.

F. C., Toledo.—The fastest even mile time in this country was made by Herzog at Cincinnati in May, 1869.

LAWRENCE.—The party who bet that three minutes would win the race, loses, because the time was more than three minutes.

EUREKA, Baltimore.—Fox's new theatre in Philadelphia is not sufficiently advanced to tell what kind of a structure it will be.

C. B. LEAR,

inst., produced the largest field of starters and the most obstinately contested race of the season. Ten horses were entered and nine of them came to the post; J. Odikirk's black stallion Patchen Chief being the solitary absentee, he being withdrawn from the turf until next fall. This race had been postponed from the preceding Friday, and, like all postponed races, it failed to draw a large crowd, for there was great doubt about it coming off, it not having been advertised in the morning papers. There were only about two hundred people present, but the entrance money covered the purse given, and saved the proprietor from any loss. The winner was entitled to receive $1,400, the second horse $600, and the third $700. The race was mile heats, best three in five, in harness. The starters were Alec Patterson's ch g Dreadnaught, Hiram Woodruff's blk m Jessie Wales, E. C. White's b g Ed. White, S. W. Brown's ch g Locust, Dan Mace's g g Medoc, W. Page's b g Shepard Knapp, Jr., J. Murphy's g g Carroll, C. Hill's ch g W. H. Taylor and W. H. Saunders' b g Western New York. Before the start Jessie Wales had the call, bringing in pools $100; Dreadnaught, $75; Ed. White, $33; Locust, $25, and the field, comprising Medoc, Carroll, Taylor, Western New York and Shepard Knapp, $40. Jessie Wales won the first heat by two lengths from Carroll in 2:30¼ and was then backed against the field. Ed. White won the second heat by two lengths from Jessie Wales in 2:28, Carroll distanced, and the winner of the heat at once became the favorite. Dreadnaught won the third heat by the same distance from Jessie Wales in 2:30½, and, although temporarily the favorite, Ed. White deposed him from the position before they started for the fourth heat, which Medoc won, after a most exciting race, by half a length from Locust, but the judges gave the heat to Locust on account of Medoc's running, no time being recorded in consequence. Ed. White retained his position as the favorite head of the betting quotations, with Jessie Wales second favorite. The fifth heat was won by Medoc after a determined struggle with Locust, who broke on the home-stretch and went all to pieces, Ed. White coming in second. Time, 2:30¼. Shepard Knapp was now withdrawn, and Medoc had the call in the betting, which was very light, for most of the speculators had all their funds in the pool box. The favorite won the heat by three lengths from Ed. White in 2:31¾, and was then backed at $100 to $20 against the field. After a gallant and well contested struggle Medoc won the heat and race by a neck from Ed. White in 2:34. Summary:—

FASHION COURSE, July 5.—Trotting.—Purse $3,000, for horses that never beat 2:29; $1,500 to the first, $800 to the second and $700 to the third horse; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

THE SARATOGA RACES.—Saratoga this year can boast of two race meetings, the first commencing on Thursday, the 14th, and continuing six days, and the second on the 12th of August. The most important events of the forthcoming meeting are the Travers' Stakes for three year olds, $50 each, p. p. with $1,500 added; seventy subscribers; the mile and quarter dash race, 15 entries at $50 each, p. p., with $1,000 added; the Saratoga Stakes, for two year olds, 47 subscribers, at $50 each, $1,000 added; and the Saratoga Cup, eighteen subscribers, at $50 each, p. p. with $1,000 added. Kingfisher, who won the Belmont Stakes at Jerome Park, is the favorite nearly against the field for the Travers' Stakes, while Helmbold is the favorite at evens for the Cup. A capital race meeting is anticipated, for the fields will be large, the stakes rich, and the best thoroughbreds in the country are entered, and have arrived at Saratoga.

THE SUMMER MEETING at Newmarket, Eng., was held last week. The Queen's Plate, run for on the 8th, was won by Watts' D m Mysotis, by Newminster, out of Souvenir, beating Formosa, second, and Columbine third.

BASE BALL.

ATHLETIC vs. WHITE STOCKINGS.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

ATHLETIC B. B. GROUNDS, PHILADELPHIA, July 11th, 1870.

About five thousand spectators assembled at the grounds, Columbia avenue and Seventeenth street this afternoon, to witness the game between the Athletics and the White Stockings, of Chicago. A protracted dispute arose about the selection of an umpire, the White Stockings naming John Grum, of the Eckfords, of Brooklyn, and Harvard Kern, of the West Philadelphia Club. The White Stockings left the field, but Cuthbert and Woods returned and finally compromised on Wm. Osterheldt, of the West Philadelphia Club. The White Stockings are playing Burns as pitcher, consequently the game is but a social one, as Burns played against the Athletics with the Unions, of Morrisiana, on the 18th of May. The betting was 100 to 50 in favor of the Athletics. The White Stockings won the toss and sent the Athletics to the bat. A dead ball was used.

First Innings.—Reach went to first on called balls; McBride was caught on the fly by Pinkham; Malone struck out; Reach came home on a wild pitch, and Fisler was put out on a high foul fly by Pinkham. One run.....McAtee was caught on the fly by Bechtel; Hodes was put out at first base by Frait and Fisler and Wood on the fly by Saddiffe. No runs.

2.—Sensendefer struck out; Berry was caught on the fly by McAtee; Radcliffe secured one base on a safe hit, but was left, as Bechtel struck out on the fly by Wood. No runs. Cuthbert was put out on the fly by Bechtel; Flynn got three bases by wild throws of McBride, and came home on Meyerle's fine hit to centre for three bases. Craver's bombshot to left sent Meyerle home, and by a wild throw of Malone's Craver came home. A superb stop by Radcliff disposed of Burns: Pinkham at first base. A superb stop by Radcliff disposed of Pinkham at first base; Burns was put out on the fly by Wood. Three runs.

3. Pratt got to first on a called ball, and was forced out at second by Reach, whose high hit to third was missed on the fly by Pinkham; McBride was nuffed by Burns; Reach and McBride came home on a wild throw of Craver to first, but was left by Sensendefer going out on a foul bound. Two runs.....McAtee was put out at first by Reach and Fisler; Hodes went out on a foul fly by Malone; Wood, Cuthbert, Flynn, Meyerle, Craver and Pinkham followed with safe one base hits, and all scored runs except the latter, who was left, as Burns, after making his first by a missed fly catch of McBride, was run out by Fisler and Reach. Five runs.

4. Berry got his base on called balls; Radcliff went out on the fly by Cuthbert, Bechtel on a foul fly by Hodes, and Pratt on the fly by Craver. No runs.....McAtee made his first by a safe hit, Hodes was put out at first by a splendid stop of Sensendefer and a fine right to Wood; Wood was put out at first by Frait and Foster, McAtee coming home. Cuthbert secured one base by a splendid hit, but was forced out at second base by Flynn's hit to Radcliff. One run.

5. Reach went out on a tip bound by Hodes, and Malone on called balls, and Foster on the fly, by Wood. Sensendefer obtained one base by a safe hit to left field, and Radcliff was caught on a high fly by Cuthbert, leaving Berry and Sensendefer on bases. Two runs.....Fisler and Merrill struck out on each by safe hits and scored runs. Craver was caught on the fly by Sensendefer. Burns struck out, and Pinkham, who made his base by a safe hit, but was run out by Reach and McBride.

6. Bechtel and Pratt were put out at first by Pinkham and McAtee, and Reach was caught on the fly by Cuthbert. No runs.....Burns was put out on a foul fly by Fisler; McAtee went out on a tip bound to Sensendefer; Hodes obtained his base by a safe hit to left field, had Wood caught on the fly by Sensendefer. No runs.

7. McBride made a base on called balls; Malone sent McBride home and reached his first by a good grounder to right field. Fisler's safe hit was caught on the fly by Hodes; Sensendefer's grounder went through Craver's legs at short stop, Malone coming home; Sensendefer went to third on wild pitched balls and stole home; Berry and Radcliff went out, first on called balls, and both came home on it passed ball over the fence. Burns, whose pitching had been terribly wild, was now relieved by Meyerle. Bechtel made his second by a wild throw of McAtee to Meyerle, who had covered the first base; Bechtel was put out at first by Wood and McAtee, Bechtel coming home; Reach got to his first on called balls; McBride secured two bases by a muff and wild throw of Hodes, Reach came home on a wild pitch; Malone got to first on three balls, but was caught napping at first, and put out by Meyerle's throw to McAtee. Two runs.....Cuthbert got one base on muff of Radcliff, stole his 2d, and went home on a passed ball; Flynn waited a long time, and had two strikes called on him, then went to first on called balls; Meyerle hit to Frait, who fielded the ball to Reach to cut off Flynn, but Reach dropped it, thus losing a nice chance for a double play; Craver was caught on the fly by Sensendefer, and Pinkham went out by a superb fly trap taken by Malone; Burns struck out. One run.

8. Fisler was caught on the fly by Burns, Sensendefer and Berry were put out at 1st base by Wood and McAtee. No runs.....McAtee went out on a tip bound taken by Malone. Hodes made his 1st by a safe hit to left field. Wood was mis-thrown to, on a fine fly by Malone and then struck out. Hodes ran to 2d on a foul struck by Cuthbert and was put out. The decision, although perfectly plain, appeared sore to the Chicagoans and the game stopped about 10 minutes, the White Stockings foolishly urging and endeavoring to get the umpire to change his perfectly just decision. No runs. Great excitement.

9. Radcliff made his 1st by a safe bounder to left field. Bechtel was caught on the fly by Cuthbert, Frait made one base by a safe hit to short left field, and Reach went to 1st on called balls. Three men were now on the bases, when a passed ball let Radcliffe in; McBride's fine hit to right field sent in Malone and Frait, and Reach home by a lucky bounder over Hodes' head; Fisler and Sensendefer got aired bases through errors on the part of Pinkham and Wood. McBride coming home; Berry was caught on the fly by Burns, Malone coming home; Radcliff was caught on the fly by Hodes. Five runs.....Wood made his base by muff of Radcliff; Cuthbert was caught on a foul bound by Frait; Flynn out at first base by Reach and Fisler; Meyerle was caught on a foul bound by Malone. No runs. THE STARS IN YANKEE LAND.

On the 4th of July the Star Club, of Brooklyn, joined the crowd of country trip takers and went to Middletown, Conn. Now this thriving place, lacking the spirit of emulation which incites other towns to improve their abiding places, by adding a first rate ball ground to their local attractions, and obliges the base ball fraternity to content themselves with a common rough field, ball played over the result is that any display of skilful fielding, except in the way of catching high balls is out of the question, and the local clubs are the sufferers by it in contests with outside organizations. This was shown in the games played by the Mansfield nine and the Wesleyan University nine with the Stars on the 4th inst., the latter defeating the Yankee ball tossers with ease, and that, too, without their regular pitcher, Cummings, Jewell pitching in one game and Rogers in the other. It is not necessary to refer to these games further than to give the scores, which we append:—

THE ATHLETICS, of Philadelphia, are to start on the 23d inst., on a tour. The following is their programme of arrangements:—Allegheny Club, Pittsburgh, July 23d; Riverside Club, Portsmouth, Ohio, July 25th; Cincinnati Club, Cincinnati, July 26th; Chicago Club, Chicago, Ill., August 2d; Forest City, Rockford, Ill., August 4th; Forest City, Cleveland, Ohio, August 6th; Harrington, Seventh street and Columbia avenue, August 8th (exemption game).

THE SERENOMA CLUB, of Ottawa, Ill., recently elected the following officers:—President, C. A. Leland; Vice President, J. Kellogg; Recording Secretary, G. W. Blake; Corresponding Secretary, Geo. S. S. Sherwood; Treasurer, Jno. F. MacKinlay; Directors—Messrs. Nash, Bryant and Haskell. They will extend a hearty welcome to any eastern club that may favor them with a visit.

CHICAGO vs. AMATEUR CHAMPION STARS.

FINE FIELDING GAME.

The first match between the Star club and the White Stocking nine of the Chicago club, took place on the Capitoline grounds, July 9th, in the presence of about 3,000 spectators, the previous poor play of the White Stockings having considerably lessened the interest in their games. The contest was commenced late, as the Chicago nine refused to play unless Burns was allowed to pitch, and the Stars refused to countenance any violation of the rules. Finally, Jewell, the Captain of the Stars, consented to act upon Mr. Phelp's statement that he did not consider his club as yet an Association club, inasmuch as their application for probationary membership had not been replied to, and if this was so they could play Burns, but if it was afterwards shown that the Chicago club were in the Association, then the game would become a forfeited one by the Stars.

First Innings.—At 3.55 P. M. the Stars sent the Chicago nine to the bat, with McAtee as their first striker, and he was easily disposed of by Beavans and Packer. Hodes then hit a short ball towards third, which Cummings picked up in time, but threw badly to first, and Packer not holding the ball, Hodes had a life given him. Wood then hit a safe bounder and reached his second; but Cuthbert was prettily caught by Jewell on a running foul fly catch. Flynn then struck three times and missed, and the ball passing Jewell, he rescued his base, Wood getting in by the same error. Treacy then hit a ball which fell into Clyne's hands, and the innings closed with two runs scored, but none earned.....On the other side Rogers popped up a ball for Wood to take. Jewell took his base on called balls, and easily working round on the swift and irregular pitching of Burns, came in on an over pitch. This was the only run scored, as Dollard and Clyne both gave easy chances for outs and retired.

2. McAtee alone made his base by a hit, he popping a safe ball over short stop's head. Burns striking out, no runs being scored, as Dollard captured the others by well taken fly balls.....On the Star side the order of retirement was one, two, three, Burns wisely pitching at a medium pace to save the catcher.

3. Cuthbert and Flynn hit the dead ball—one of Ross's new one ounces of rubber balls—safely and prettily for their bases and earned one run, but as Beavans dropped the ball Meyerle sent him, two runs were scored.....On the other side the White Stockings handled the whitewash brush in pretty style, a fine double play by Meyerle, Wood and McAtee being a feature of the fielding.

4. But for a dropped fly ball by Clyne the White Socks would have been put out in one, two, three order; but this error gave Burns a life, but on Woods' good hit to right field he became a victim of Jewell's at home base, through the prompt return of the ball by Clyne to Packer and him to Jewell, Burns imprudently leaving a sure thing at 3d.....On the other side the stars again drew a blank, though Dollard and Clyne hit sharp grounders out of reach for their bases, but Dollard imprudently took liberties with McAtee and was run out, and before Clyne could get in the third hand was put out.

5. McAtee and Hodes hit well for their bases, but the next three were put out in succession after McAtee got in, Clyne making a pretty catch.....Once more the Stars were whitewashed in one, two, three order, the close of the fifth innings leaving the tally at 5 to 1 in favor of Chicago.

6. Neither party scored, the White Stockings being handsomely disposed of, Beavens taking a hot liner in style from Treacey's bat and Burns being disposed of by one of those sharp fly tips by Jewell, the Stars giving their opponents easy chances to whitewash them. Thus far the game had been a rather one-sided display, the Stars as yet not having carned a run in the game, while had their fielding been up to the mark, the Chicago score would have been 2 only, the White Stockings finding Cummings a difficult player to hit. Burns, after the first innings, had pitched at a medium pace, and, consequently, having more command of the ball, was more than successful. Up to the close of the sixth innings the Stars had handled the ball.....of their bad display in the field—but all a lively ball instead of trying to hit the ball against it, by which he was to where they desired to send it. The fact was they had not gotten over their Connecticut trip, during which they practiced heavy hitting with a lively ball and won the applause of a gaping crowd of country villagers by their "splendid" long field hits for seconds, a style of batting the Stars have indulged in so long that they cannot quite get into truly scientific hitting when using a ball which obliges them to do so.

7. The Chicago nine opened fire on Cummings in lively style, and earning two runs scored four, being assisted by errors in the field in which Manly, Rogers, Jewell and Dollard were concerned. On the Star side the boys began to rap the ball up to Clyne in the first place, Burns sent in some pacers, and the swift ones just suiting the Stars, they began to punish him, and but for bad judgment in running the bases they would, in all probability, have regained their lost ground, but perhaps have obtained a less number of runs. Beavans ran for 2d while Cummings was there, and was put out on returning, and Clyne was put out in trying to get home when there was no hurry for running. But for these errors four runs would have been scored, if not more, and the game tied. In the 8th innings, the Stars batted well for one run, Jewell being left after a good hit, and as the Chicagos drew blanks in both

8 and 9.—The Stars entered upon their ninth innings with a good chance to pull up. Two strikes, however, were delivered in succession, and the third was nearly put out, the crowd leaving at the time rapidly; but after McAtee had given Beavans a life, the Stars began to bat again, Worth and Packer batting well for three runs, two runs having been scored when Manly put a high ball into Tracy's hands at left field and ended the game.

The umpire discharged his duties impartially and with good judgment, and he kept both the pitchers and the strikers to a strict observance of the rules, as will be seen by the shortness of the game. The score:—

TRIP OF THE UNIONS, OF MORRISANIA.

UNION vs. OLYMPIC.

The Union Club, of Morrisania, visited Washington on July 4th, and celebrated the day by a game with the Olympics. The contest was rather one-sided, the Washingtonians taking the lead in the third innings and maintaining it with ease until the close, out-playing their opponents both at the bat and in the field, and finally winning by the score appended:—

MARYLAND vs. UNION.

The New Yorkers met the Maryland Club, of Baltimore, on the 6th inst., on the Madison Avenue Grounds, the attendance being very limited. The result was a disastrous defeat for the Unions, who were minus several of their best players, through injuries sustained in Washington. The score:—

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

A LOVER'S LAMENT.

Two maids were walking in the grove,
(They both were growing old),
The one to tell a tale of love,
The other to be told.

"He is not rich," the older said,
"Nor handsome, nor high born;
The man whom I propose to wed
The most of girls would scorn."

"What is he, then? you make me fear;"
The maiden's tears fell fast;
"He was the first to offer, dear,
And he may be the last!"

ANXIOUS TO MARRY.

A LOVING LASS PROPOSES TO A TIMID M. D.

A young physician of Louisville, Ky., has been pursued by a stranger but beautiful young lady with the terrible purpose of forcing him to marry her, says the Journal of a recent date, and in illustration of the above statement it says:—"A few afternoons since, as one of the late graduates of a local medical college was returning to his office from a stroll about town, he was surprised and delighted to discover what he conceived to be a young lady patiently awaiting him. In the short moment occupied in walking from the yard gate to the office door his mind was active in making conjectures as to the probable character of her malady and in recalling the contents of all the medical books he had ever read. As he approached nearer and saw her elegant costume and returned her stately and refined bow, he was somewhat inspired with visions of greenbacks and canceled debts.

"Well, my young lady," the graduate said, with all the dignity and consequence of an old practitioner, "what can I do for you?"

"You can marry me," abruptly replied the strange young lady, with her sweetest smile and most delightful inclination of the head. "You can have me for a wife."

The poor young doctor blushed, trembled, gazed with wonder at her, and was about to rush forth from his office, when the young lady, seeing that he needed to be reassured, glided quickly to him, and resting her hand upon his shoulder, whispered, "Do not be astonished. Oh! I have loved you so. I have gazed at you often, and my heart has said, 'He ought to be my husband.'" The victim tried to escape, but she gently held him. In his desperation he at length found a tongue to say:—"I am sorry, madam, that I cannot gratify you. I am a poor young"—but he got no further, for she sealed his lips with a kiss, and in the gentle accents of her gentlest manner said:—"Oh! what if you are poor, dearest? We shall still be so happy. You can practice your profession, and I will take in sewing, and will cook, and wash, and iron, and make everything so comfortable! Oh! do come on and marry me!" (Another kiss.) The young doctor became almost annihilated, but by a violent effort he disentangled himself, and rushed wildly from the room, the last he heard being that sweet love term, "dearest." As he hastened along the street he cast repeated and anxious glances behind him to see if that marriageable young woman was in pursuit. No! He blessed his stars that she was not. But, after the lapse of an hour or so she began to feel desirous of returning to his office. It was growing dark, at length summoned up courage to approach his own room. He cautiously peeped around the fence, and she was gone. Since then his neighbors have observed that he always peeps tremblingly around that fence when he approaches his office, and his friends have noticed that he wears his coat and hat even during these hot days, as if to be prepared to bolt at the shortest notice. It is supposed that this young lady (like many others credited with sound sense) is a monomaniac on the subject of marriage. She is good looking, and was on the occasion above mentioned handsomely dressed. To effect a cure of her malady, of the character of which he was so well convinced, would have been a splendid opening for the young doctor, but he has expressed himself as averse to making the attempt. He is afraid that if he were to succeed in this case he would be obliged to make a specialty of such practice, and that his nerves would sink under the trial.

FASHION'S EDICT IN MORMONDOM.

RESOLUTIONS BY THE DAUGHTERS OF THE SAINTS.

The following resolutions were adopted by the First Young Ladies' Department of the Ladies' Co-operative Retrenchment Association in Salt Lake City, organized May 27, 1870:—

Resolved, That realizing ourselves to be wives and daughters of apostles, prophets, and elders of Israel, and, as such, that high responsibilities rest upon us, and that we shall be accountable to God, not only for the privileges we inherit from our fathers, but also for the blessings we enjoy as Latter-day Saints, we desire to unite and co-operate with and do mutually pledge ourselves that we will uphold and sustain each other in doing good.

Resolved, That inasmuch as the saints have been commanded to gather from out Babylon and "not partake of her sins, that they receive not of her plagues," we should not consent to nor feel that we should not endeavor to imitate the pride, folly, and fashions of the world, and inasmuch as the Church of Jesus Christ is likened unto a city set on a hill to be a beacon of light to all nations, it is our duty to set examples for others, instead of seeking to pattern after them.

Resolved, That we will respect ancient and modern apostolic instructions. St. Paul exhorted Timothy to teach "the women to adorn themselves in modest apparel—not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls or costly array, but which becometh women possessing godliness with good works." Peter also, in his first epistle, in speaking of woman, says:—"Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and wearing of gold, or of putting on apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of great price; for after this manner, in old time, the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves." In a revelation given to the Latter-Day Saint in 1831, the Lord said:—"Thou shalt not feel proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands." All of which we accept as true principle, and such as should be fully illustrated in our practice.

Resolved, That, with a firm and settled determination to honor the foregoing requirements and having deeply sensible of the sinful ambition and vanity in dress among the daughters of Zion, which are calculated to foster the pride of the world and shut out the spirit of God from the heart, we mutually agree to exert our influence, both by precept and by example, to suppress and to eventually eradicate the evil.

Resolved, That admitting variety has its charms, we know that real beauty appears to better advantage in a plain dress than when bedizened with finery; and, while we disapprove extravagance and waste, we would not, like the Quakers, recommend a uniform, but would have each one to choose the style best adapted to her own taste and person; at the same time we shall avoid and ignore as obsolete all extremes which are opposed to good sense or repulsive to modesty.

Resolved, That inasmuch as cleanliness is a characteristic of a saint and an imperative duty, we shall discard the dragging skirts, and, for decency's sake, those disgustingly short ones, extending no lower than the boot tops. We also regard "paniers," and whatever approximates in appearance toward the "Grecian bend," a burlesque on the natural beauty and dignity of the human female form, and will not disgrace our persons by wearing them.—Deseret News, June 30th.

ADULTERY AND CONFESSION.—Late English papers contain a strange story that comes from Lisbon. M. Viera de Castro, formerly Deputy, and an author of some note, had strangled his wife. He found that she was carrying on an underhand correspondence with M. Maria de Garrett, who was considered one of his most intimate friends, and in the end she confessed her actual guilt. The husband then half smothered her with chloroform, after which he completed her death by strangulation. De Garrett, to whom he afterwards sent a challenge for a duel a autrance, declined to fight with him, but intimated that he was willing to lose his life as an expiation for the injury inflicted, adding that he should pass a certain spot at such an hour. The wretched man, however, did not come by that road either, but went to the Prefecture of Police and constituted himself a prisoner. The other, it was rumored, had entered a Trappist monastery. The murdered lady was only nineteen.

MURDER AND OUTRAGE.—On Saturday evening, June 28th, two girls, aged respectively eleven and four years, started from their home in the southwestern part of Indianapolis, Ind., in search of a cow which had strayed away, and not returning, a search was instituted and the bodies of both of them were found in the canal. They were at first supposed to have been accidentally drowned, but a post mortem examination revealed the fact of the older girl having been horribly ravished. The younger one was probably drowned to conceal all trace of the perpetrators of the crime. The Common Council, at a special meeting, offered $1,000 for the arrest of the guilty parties. Two boys, aged 17 and 18 years, were arrested on the 30th on suspicion of having committed the outrage, and taken to jail, followed by a large crowd of excited people, who were with difficulty kept from lynching them, and a heavy police force was required to keep the crowd from carrying their design into effect.

A QUACK DOCTOR RUNS AWAY WITH SIX WOMEN AT A TIME!—Dr. Young, the quack cancer doctor, who swindled Messrs. James & Jones of something near $1,000, and who has been living below Blountville, shipped his wife to North Carolina, from which state he hails, swindled a dozen or two of gentlemen and ran away on Saturday morning with six young women from the neighborhood of the junction of the Holston rivers. He took the western train at Union with four of the damsels and was joined at Jonesboro by the other two. He checked his baggage to Louisville and is supposed to have gone to Utah with his "happy family."—Bristol News.

A ROMAN SCANDAL.—The sensation in Rome at present, is the discovery of a scandalous love affair between a handsome young Abbe attending the Council and the fascinating young wife of an influential Roman Senator. The latter, having some suspicions, informed his wife that he was going to Naples for several days, but returning at night by a secret staircase, he surprised the guilty couple. A terrible struggle ensued between the senator and churchman, but the latter succeeded at last in escaping, although not without receiving a severe stab in the side. His condition is said to be critical.

A KISS FOR TEN DOLLARS.—An anecdote is current to the effect that an Iowa man tried to kiss his neighbor's wife, but before he got through the lady hit him on the head with a rolling pin and put him out of doors. The husband took a revolver and went to the man for satisfaction, but concluded to settle it by taking the villain's note for $10, which he traded off for a corn plough. The man who holds the note can't collect, the giver of it claiming that he did not get value received.

"THE LIVING WAX WORK FIGURE."—"In the year 1852 the Albany Museum, of Albany, N. Y., had a large collection of wax work figures, which were on exhibition in glass cases in one of the large rooms. Attached to the dramatic company was a comical genius of the name of Charles Salisbury, notorious for his habit of playing practical jokes. One Fourth of July the facetious Salisbury had to represent the father of his country, the immortal Washington, and, of course, was dressed in the traditional uniform. The doors were just opened for the evening performance, and the visitors had commenced strolling through the curiosity rooms, when a mischievous idea struck Mr. Salisbury, who, opening the door of one of the wax work cases, quickly took a position among the figures and tried to look as immovable as possible. Fortune favored him in this instance, for a countryman and his wife, together with his daughter, a young miss about eighteen years of age, were the first that entered the room. As the young lady approached the great Washington he bestowed on her a most unutterably wink. 'Good gracious, ma!' she exclaimed, 'that figure of Washington winked at me.' 'Nonsense, child,' replied the mother, 'you are so conceited you think every body is in love with you.' But at this moment she was almost speechless herself, for the venerable Washington had his fingers applied to his nose in a very suggestive manner. 'Oh, William!' she exclaimed, grasping her husband's arm, 'the look in that.' 'What is it?' asked the countryman; 'why, I believe you women folks are crazy.' At this instant General Washington struck a belligerent attitude and uttered a terrific yell! It is needless to say that the whole party tumbled down stairs pell mell, and related the wonderful story, but in the meantime Mr. Salisbury quietly slipped out of the case, returned to his dressing-room and nothing more was ever seen of the 'Living Wax Figure.'" So writes George Lascelles, comedian, in a letter to the CLIPPER.

A THRIFTY wife wonders why the men can't manage to do something useful. Might they not as well amuse themselves in smoking hams as smoking cigars?

You cannot do two things well at once; you cannot carry two melons under one arm.

AQUATICS.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATE.

Sport On the Waters Everywhere.

ROWING REGATTA AT BOSTON.

The citizens of the Hub of the Universe have a reputation of doing everything which they undertake in a style not to be surpassed, and probably nowhere else is the nation's birthday observed with so much enthusiasm as there. Each and all, both great and small, seemingly exert themselves to the very utmost to render its observance complete in every respect. As a natural consequence many of the denizens of other portions of New England, as well as other eastern states, flock to the Modern Athens to enjoy the scenes which invariably mark this festive occasion. Of all the features of the varied programme, none is so deservedly popular as the rowing jubilee annually held on the waters of the Charles river, never failing to attract an immense concourse of ladies and gentlemen to the banks of that stream, who are amply rewarded for whatever inconvenience they may experience in the way of limited "elbow room," or the too fervent rays of Old Sol, by the excellent sport witnessed between the leading oarsmen and crews in the country. Such a widespread reputation has Boston achieved for the admirable manner in which these regattas are conducted, not less than the galaxy of aquatic stars annually participating, that each year seems to add to the number who wend their way to the scene, as was demonstrated by the immense throng which on Monday of last week lined the city bank of the stream nearly the entire length of the course, covered the roofs and gazed in groups from the windows of the houses facing the rivers, which swarmed with every describable and indescribable kind of craft. The weather was delightful, a cool, refreshing breeze conducing to render comfortable those who attended. The city committee, under whose supervision the programme was carried out faithfully, were Alderman G. T. W. Braman and F. W. Jacobs, and Councilmen M. F. Wells, Sidney Squires and E. C. Kingsbury. The judges were John D. Parker, Jr., starter; Edward N. Fenno, E. J. Conrey, Thos. S. Edmonds, Jas. Fitzgerald, D. G. Gorman, E. J. Courcey, John T. Gardner and Dan'l J. Sweeney; timekeeper, J. N. George. Punctually at 3 o'clock, P. M., the signal was given for the boats to fall into line for the

FIRST RACE.

For Whitehall boats; distance, two miles. First prize, $75; second prize, $50; third prize, $25. Entries:—

Phil. Sheridan—Rowed by T. Daly and M. Fox.

North End Boy—Rowed by John Fanning, Robert Kennedy.

Fannie—Rowed by James McGee and Geo. Jackson.

P. S. Gilmore—Rowed by L. McKenley and J. G. McKenley.

On the word being given, the Sheridans shot well ahead, and their fine stroke and surround overwhelmed at once made them favorites in the betting. They did not, however, retain their conspicuous position long, for they wandered considerably to the middle of the stream, losing ground by this. The order on passing the stake-boat was Gilmore first, North End Boy second, Fannie third, Sheridans fourth. This suffered no change on the home-stretch, the Gilmore bearing the North Enders by about three lengths; the Fannie was a length and a half behind them, the Sheridans, four lengths farther back, brought up the rear. Time, 20m. 45½sec.

SECOND RACE.

For single scull wherries; distance, two miles. First prize, $75; second prize, $50; third prize, $25. The entries were:—

Walter Brown, Jr.—Rowed by Walter Brown.

Ella Strange—Rowed by T. C. Butler.

Maud Stovell—Rowed by Thomas Doyle, Jr.

Brown was on the outside, Butler in the centre and Doyle against the shore. Brown shot well ahead, with a long, strong stroke, and from the start had the race his own way. Doyle, however, gave him a brush on the way to the stake-boat, but he afterwards got off the direct course considerably, and passed the stake-boat last, Butler second and Brown well ahead. The order remained the same, although resting on his oars on the way home, came in at the finish six lengths ahead, amid the shouts of the people. Time, 18min. 48secs., 18min. 18secs., and 18min. 46secs.

THIRD RACE.

For double scull boats; distance two miles. First prize, $100; second prize, $60. Entries:—

Alabama (Winnisimmet Boat Club)—Rowed by L. Streeter and O. M. Rowland.

Thetis (Thetis Club, Medford)—Rowed by C. O. Burbank and William A. Thompson.

Fairy—Rowed by Daniel E. Poor, C. J. Lewis, A. C. Pike, T. C. Butler and J. H. Butler.

The boats took position from the shore in the order named, and at the start the Butler boys, with a fine, long, telling stroke, shot ahead. The Thetis was well manned and maintained second position, while the Adelaide showed fight and at one time appeared quite prominent, though they got from the inside to the outside of the course and did not keep to it. At the stake-boat the Butlers were well ahead, with Thetis second, Fairy third and Adelaide withdrawn. Coming home, the Butlers having considerable lead—in fact, a hundred yards from home—the stroke, J. H. Butler, rested on his oars and allowed the bow to do double work. They came in three lengths ahead of the Thetis, which was well in advance of the Fairy, the bow oarsman of the latter suffered immensely from a boil on his right knee, and was prevented from pulling, in consequence, as he would otherwise have done. Time, 18m. 46½sec.; 18m. 58½sec.; 18m. 50½sec.

FOURTH RACE.

For four-oared working boats; rowed on the gunwale; distance two miles. First prize, $100; second prize, $50; third prize, $25. Entries:—

Can't Help It.—Robert Laughton, stroke; Abram House, James Coughlin, George Thompson, bow.

No Name.—Philip Keenan, stroke; Michael Keenan, Thomas Keenan, Charles Keenan, bow.

J. H. Warren.—J. G. McKenley, stroke; G. Foider, D. McDevlit, L. McKenley, bow.

Flora Temple.—J. Savory, stroke; J. McCurdy, D. McCanly, T. Crawford, bow.

William C. Brown.—M. Doherty, stroke; P. McDonald, P. Flannagan, C. O'Brien, bow.

Geo. B. McClellan.—P. McGahey, stroke; F. Clark, W. Davis, E. O'Neal, bow.

Hamlet.—Patrick Thomas, stroke; Malachi Collins, Burke Williams, Charles Pharsoh, bow.

P. Keagan.—Patrick Lawless, stroke; John H. Rohan, James McCormick, Jodn E. Hayes, bow.

The boats were in position from the shore in the above order. This was a fine show for a race and there was great excitement over it. The Keagan had a little advance at the start from good pulling. They were closely attended by Riley and McClellan, the latter pulling the steadiest and best stroke of all. At the stake-boat the McClellan crew pulled finely, with Can't Help It and Riley in attendance. The Riley succeeded in passing Can't Help It on the way home, but the McClellan won by a couple lengths; Riley second, Can't Help It, third; W. C. Brown, fourth; Flora Temple, fifth; Keagan, sixth; Warren, seventh, and Hamlet and No Name, tied, last. The latter two had a fine spurt together at the finish, but no conclusion was arrived at. Time, 16m. 34½sec., 14m. 53½sec., 15m. 22½sec., 15m. 47½sec., 16m. The boat Riley was, at the close of the race, objected to on account of its only weighing 197 lbs.

FIFTH RACE.—FOUR-OARED OUTRIGGERS.

For four-oared boats (lapstreaks or shells) with outriggers; distance, three miles. First prize, $300; second prize, $75; third prize, $50. Entries:—

Tom Murphy.—Walter Brown, stroke; John Biglin, C. C. Butler, Barney Biglin, bow.

Thos. J. Ward.—A. Connor, stroke; M. Fenton, P. Regan, P. McNulty, bow.

Harvard, lapstreak.—(Harvard crew.)—F. O. Lyman, stroke; G. O. Jones, G. Willis, R. S. Russell, bow.

Chas. H. Bacon.—(Winnisimmet Boat Club.)—Frank L. Barnes, stroke; Wm. Fiske, Martin Kennedy, S. Whittemore, bow.

This was the great race of the afternoon, and as each competitor appeared and took his position (in order named from the shore) the build of and stroke of the men and style of the boats were critically scrutinized. Brown's boat was a new one, made by himself but the Harvards rowed in a lapstreak, and had only on their side have performed a considerable feat; as it was, like another memorable defeat of theirs, it was "no disgrace." At the start the Harvards went off with a powerful stroke ahead of their opponents, but the McNulty crew (Thomas J. Ward had the lead at the mile and a quarter, with Harvards second, Brown's crew third, while the Bacon crew came along in the rear, and though not apparently being out of the race, they gave up shortly afterwards. From the mile distance to the stake-boat the rowing of the three crews was magnificent. On arriving there the Brown crew had a good lead, with the McNulys second. In turning, this latter boat lost headway, and also upset, and in getting his feet out of the straps one of the crew sent his heels through the side of the boat. The Harvards were thus alone left to contend with the Brown crew, and though they did their best, the latter came in easy winners by eight lengths. Time, 20 m. 34½ sec.; 20 m. 53½ sec.

THE SAILING REGATTA.

The yachting portion of the celebration also proved sufficiently attractive to draw together large numbers of persons to South Boston Point, off which the regatta took place. The tugboat Gen. A. A. Humphreys was occupied by the judges, consisting of Captain A. L. Cary, chairman; Messrs. Coolidge, Barnard, D. W. Pierce, Benjamin Dean and Henry J. McKee. The prizes for the first race were as follows:—For keel centre-boards severally—first prize, a silver pitcher, value $100; second prize, set of colors, value $30. There were seven entries for the race, the boats measuring 38 feet and upwards on the water line.

FIRST RACE.

At precisely a quarter to one o'clock the gun sounded for the boats to get under way, which they did handsomely. The Coming and Fearless took the starboard tack, while the others took the port. This Coming had the lead. The course was about five miles, as follows:—From judges' boat out Broad Sound, leaving Sam Reed buoy on the starboard, Fawn Bar on port, rounding buoy off the Northeast ledge of the Graves, leaving it on starboard, thence to Hardings buoy, leaving it on starboard, up Light House Channel, through the narrows, leaving Fort Warren, Gallop's Nix's Mate buoys and Spectacle Island on the port, to the judges' boat. The Coming was the first seen on the homestretch, and she reached the judges' boat at 40 minutes and 8 seconds past 2 o'clock. The Sadie came in next, at 57 minutes and 49 seconds past, and the Psyche at 30m. 2sec. past 3 o'clock, and the Fearless 39 minutes and 56 seconds later. The others were distanced. The prizes were awarded as follows:—

Centre-boards.—Sadie, Capt. F. Burgess, Boston, the first prize (she having an allowance of 9 minutes 34½ seconds over the Coming), and the Coming the second.

Keel-boats.—Psyche, Capt. D. S. Stone, Boston, the first; no second. The Psyche lost a man overboard, named George Slocomb, on the course out, and while rescuing him was considerably delayed. The Fearless lost her foretopmast.

SECOND RACE.

Preparation for the second class boats to get into position were promptly made. The prizes were as follows:—For centre board boats, first, silver pitcher, value $75, second, set of colors, value, $30. For keel boats, the same. The original number of entries for the race was twenty-one, but only about fifteen started (length, from twenty-six to thirty-eight feet). The boats made a splendid start at a quarter past one o'clock, the Ranger taking the starboard tack, and leading, while most of the others followed in her wake. The course was from the judges' boat, down west way, leaving Thompson and Rainsford islands on the starboard, Long and George's islands, and buoy No. 7 on port, and back through the Narrows, George's, Gallop's, Nix's Mate buoys, Fort Independence and buoy No. 1 on port, to the judges' boat. Distance about sixteen miles. The Violet was the first back, arriving at 45 minutes and 11 seconds past 3 o'clock; the Clytie came next, at 54 minutes and 32 seconds; Kelpie, 55 minutes and 23 seconds; Napoleon, 4 o'clock, 1 minute and 54 seconds; Cesaie, 10 minutes and 27 seconds; Mary, 12 minutes and 13 seconds; Starlight, 13 minutes and 33 seconds; Mist, 17 minutes and 38 seconds; Annie, 21 minutes and 37 seconds; Daisy, 34 minutes and 53 seconds; Mystery, 51 minutes and 34 seconds, Ranger, 57 minutes and 45 seconds, and Elisa A. West, 39 minutes and 30 seconds. The others were distanced. The prizes were awarded as follows:—

Centre-boards.—First prize, Violet, Captain F. D. Child, South Boston; second prize, Kelpie, Captain A. Meredith, South Boston.

Keel boats.—First prize, Mist, Captain J. H. Pitman, East Boston; second prize, Starlight, Captain F. S. Wright, Boston.

THIRD RACE.

Directly the second race had got under way the boats for the third were called to time. Their measurement was less than twenty feet each. The prizes were as follows, viz:—For centre-boards—First prize, a silver pitcher, value, $30; second, a marine glass, value, $15; prizes for keel boats the same. The whole number of boats entered was fifty, but only forty-two started. The starting gun was sounded at half-past one o'clock, when they effected a good go off. The sight was exceedingly pretty. The Charlotte was the first to take the lead. The Quicksten got entangled with a small row boat, and was considerably delayed. The course was from the judges' boat round buoy No. 4, Dorchester Bay, leaving it on the port, thence to buoy No. 6 on Lower Middle, leaving it on the port; thence to Black Ledge buoy No. 11, leaving it on the port; thence to judges' boat. The first boat to return was the Posey, at 14 minutes and 57 seconds past 3 o'clock, the Secret following at 15min. 43sec. past; the Pannie at 17min. 2sec.; Chevalier, 18min. 45sec.; Brilliant, 20min. 35sec.; Bonnie, 23min. 25sec.; Alice, 24min. 18sec.; Macduff, 27min. 25sec.; Volant, 28min. 2sec.; Phantom, 29min.; E. Harris, 29min. 14sec.; Banshee, 30min. 29sec.; Judith, 33min. 34sec.; Jennie, 33min. 15sec.; Sue Goodwin, 33min, 36sec.; Juliet, 33min. 45sec.; Gleaner, 33min. 58sec.; Ella, 36min. 30sec.; Zoe, 37min. 31sec.; A Co., 39min. 16sec.; Quicksten, 43min. 15sec.; Reuben, 44min.; Vesper, 49min. 36sec.; Restless, 50min. 5sec. The prizes were awarded as follows:—

Centre-boards.—First prize, Posey, Capt. W. Burgess, Boston; second, Secret, Capt. J. Binney, Weymouth.

Keels.—First prize, Macduff, Capt. H. Hill, Boston; second, Volant, Capt. E. W. Haines, South Boston.

The city committee consisted of the following named gentlemen:—Messrs. Christopher A. Connor, George O. Carpenter, Hollis R. Gray, Joseph T. Ryan and Wm. C. Roberts.

EUREKA BOAT CLUB REGATTA.

The annual regatta of the Eureka Club, of this city, took place on the morning of the 4th and was a very enjoyable affair, pleasantly inaugurating the festivities of the nation's holiday. There were two races on the programme, and the course was three miles, with one turn, starting from a point opposite the Club House, foot of Fourth street, East river, and pulling up stream. The initial event was for double scull shells, for which there were eight entries, as follows:—

Democrat—C. Casey and T. Donohue; colors, white and blue.
Undine—M. Scannell and R. Brown; colors, white and red.
Apprentice—James Ryan and Ed. Jordan; colors, white and red.
Eureka—Charles McAllister and J. Kernan; colors, white and red.
Dexter—W. Dennis and Williams; colors, blue.
Minnehaha—W. Doyle and J. Brady; colors, white and blue.
Dreamer—J. McAllister and W. Steen; colors, white and blue.
Lady Gay—J. Cashman and W. Coughlin; colors, white and red.

The prize offered were $75 and the club pennant to the winner, $40, $25, $20, $12, $10 and $8, a prize being awarded to each craft. At precisely 10 o'clock the signal was given, and the boats started pretty evenly, the heating being with large odds in favor of the Lizzie. The Apprentice first showed a lead, and kept it for three quarters of a mile, followed by the Dreamer and lady Gay, with the remaining boats about five lengths in the rear. On nearing the stake-boat the Lady Gay shoved ahead and rounded the stake-boat a full length ahead of the Lizzie, with the Metamora at her heels and the Apprentice three lengths behind, the remaining boats rounding the stake-boat but a few seconds afterward. The race up to this point was evenly contested; the Lady Gay was still leading on nearing the buoy opposite East 34th street, but here the bow oar snapped his blade in two, and this discouraged the crew and served to encourage the others, who were now struggling for the lead. The Democrat, which had all along been in the rear, was not long in showing herself in front, closely pressed by the Lizzie and Apprentice. Opposite East 20th street the Apprentice led by a good length, but did not maintain its advantage long, as it was soon passed by the Lizzie, which, in its turn, was passed by the Democrat. Now it was that the contest became really exciting, and a fine or more determined struggle is seldom, if ever, witnessed. Sufficient to say, that it was not of long duration, for, amid cheers and waving of handkerchiefs along the piers near the starting point, the Democrat came in ahead, leading the Lizzie by scarce a length, the Apprentice half a length behind the Lizzie, the Eureka 4th, Dexter 5th, Metamora 6th, Dreamer 7th and Lady Gay half an hour behind all. The Democrat completed the distance in 32 minutes 5 seconds.

The second race was for single sculls, same distance, for prizes of $50, $30 and $10 respectively. The entries were three in number, viz:—Eclipse, rowed by John Ryan; John J. Brady, rowed by Pat. Shay; Irishman, rowed by Thos. Patterson. The boats got away pretty evenly, and the race was well contested till nearing the stake-boat; here the Brady showed in front, maintained the lead nearly all the time and eventually won, beating the Irishman full three boat's lengths, the Eclipse being three minutes behind. The officers of this club are as follows:—President, James E. Brown; Secretary, Geo. E. Elliott; Treasurer, Augustus Rohr.

THE DAY AT PORTLAND, ME.

ROWING REGATTA.

Portland, "away down in Maine," vied with her sister cities of the Union in observing the day from which our independence dates, and in some respects outshone many laying claim to more importance. There was the usual rowing and sailing regattas, bringing into opposition both excellent oarsmen and yachts, and respectively attracting throngs of people, who admire aquatic sport. The course chosen by the judges—Capt. Chas. H. Merrill, Capt. Adie, Henry P. Wood, Wm. R. Wood and Capt. B. J. Willard—for the rowing regatta, was from Union wharf to the western side of the Great Eastern wharves and return, a distance of two miles.

FIRST RACE.

For four and six oared boats, five seconds per mile being allowed the former. First prize, $75; second prize, $50. There were eight entries, but only five started, being placed as follows, the first named being next the wharf:—

Emerald.—John O'Donnell, stroke; Wm. Logue, A. H. Larkin, E. Brady, bow; uniform, white shirts and green handkerchiefs.

Emerald No. 2.—Wm. Logue, stroke; A. P. Palmer, W. Palmer, G. Hubbard, J. T. Stevens and R. F. Loper, jr.

Regatta committee:—Messrs. C. P. Palmer, W. Palmer, G. Hubbard, J. T. Stevens and R. F. Loper, jr.

AT BUFFALO, N. Y.,

The occasion was likwise celebrated by a festival on the aqueous element, it being estimated that over thirty thousand persons assembled to witness the oarsmen of Buffalo and vicinity feather blades on the raging Erie canal. This speaks volumes for the interest taken in rowing pastime by the citizens thereof, and we trust may be the means of promoting the interests of the same thereaway.

THE FIRST RACE

was for single scull clinker boats, distance 2½ miles, for prizes of $12, $8 and $5 respectively. W. B. Sirret was referee, while Geo. Kerr, J. T. Hingston, Wm. Hingston and Chas. Jessemine acted as judges, the latter also acting as judge on the second boat being as follows:—Geo. Neese, 24:30; Michael Ryan, 24:31; Joe Day, 24:31¾. From this it will be seen that the contest was very spirited.

THE SECOND RACE

was the great event of the day. It was for four-oared boats, distance three miles, for prizes of $125, $65 and $35 respectively. Frank Bates was referee, while Alumni Cluett, Chas. Fiske, Trumbull Carey and Sam'l Hingston, acted as judges. The entries numbered five, as follows:—

Banshee—Cornelius Donovan, stroke; Patrick Hurley, James Monan, Wm. Jones, bow; James Donovan, coxswain; shell, 44 feet long, 22 inches wide; colors, green.

Queen City—Robert H. Hebard, stroke; James D. Hawks, No. 2; D. G. Walker, No. 3; J. T. Budd, No. 4; H. Noyes, coxswain; shell, 43 feet long, 26 inches wide; colors, dark blue.

Live Oak—Michael Hazel, stroke; Samuel Carroll, No. 2; James Carroll, No. 3; John Carroll, bow; Frederick Murray, coxswain; lapstreak, 45 feet long, 23 inches wide; colors, light blue.

Dauntless—George A. McClennon, stroke; Charles Batty, No. 2; John V. B. Thayer, No. 3; Charles Sears, bow; M. R. Kellogg, coxswain; shell, 43 feet long, 26 inches wide; colors, cherry.

Nereid—Wm. S. Cornwall, stroke; Harry Walbridge, No. 2; Wm. T. Parsons, No. 3; Samuel M. Welch, bow; Ed. Williams, coxswain; lapstreak, 38 feet long, 45 inches wide; colors, cherry.

At 5.25, P. M., the Banshee and Deacon received the word to "go," and they responded promptly, the Queen City getting the start with confidence and skill, and moving off brilliantly, and the latter showing decided nervousness and losing a stroke at the outset. In this contest the Banshee came out victorious, making the distance in 20:30, the Deacons coming in in 22:30. The boats of the Queen City and Live Oak clubs were started together at 5.56, and the Nereid thirty seconds later. The race between the first named boats was an exciting one, but the Queen City getting the lead soon after the start maintained it to the finish, coming in about a length ahead. The Live Oaks came in in 22, and the Nereid in 24:15. The first prize was awarded to the Banshee, the second to the Queen City, and the third to the Live Oak.

AT SAVANNAH, GA.,

the recurrence of the national anniversary was hailed with pleasure and observed with considerable enthusiasm. A sailing regatta was among the attractions provided, and some two thousand people journeyed by rail to the Isle of Hope, to witness the white-winged craft compete upon the waters of the Skidaway river. The course lay down the river four miles to the mouth, rounding the stake-boat located there, and returning to the starting point—a distance in all of nine miles. Ten boats were entered under the following "time" rules:—A preparatory gun will be fired at five minutes before one, and starting gun at one o'clock. Time of each boat taken as she passes the line—limitation of ten minutes allowed. Any boat starting after the tenth minute to be ruled out. Boats on starboard tack to give way to boats on port tack. The following boats entered:—First Class—Duchess Josianne, R. B. Habersham; Minnie, G. A. Wilkins; May Forest, T. W. McNish; Hope, Buckingham. Second Class—Ellen, H. Schley; Marsh Hen, A. Bonaud; Helen, C. O. Lamotte; Wave, R. M. Demere. Third Class—Alice, T. Wolverton; Sunny Side, L. Cohen. These two last mentioned boats, after making a start to contest the race, concluded not to undertake the trip, and accordingly lost their chances for the third honor. At one o'clock the gun was fired, and under a moderate breeze the different crafts moved past the judges' line in fine style, returning as the table below will show:—Duchess Josianne started at 1.03, returned at 3.52:13¾. Minnie started at 1.04:04, returned at 3.43. May Forest started at 1.04:20, returned at 3.46. Hope started at 1.08:40 and withdrew. Ellen started at 1.03:10, returned at 4.31¾. Marsh Hen started at 1.03:10, returned at 4.32¾. Helen started at 1.03:20, returned at 4.19¾. Wave started at 1.03:40, returned at 3.59. The Minnie was declared the winner of the first prize, consisting of a pitcher, two goblets and waiter, and the Wave the winner of the second prize. The boats experienced a squall near the stake-boat, and the May Forest, carrying considerable canvas, was capsized. At this point the race was exciting, but at the close it became quite tame, the boats drifting slowly in. The Minnie was managed perfectly, although meeting with no less than four disasters during the race, breaking her rudder at one time and running aground at another.

AT LOWELL, MASS.,

the citizens entered with commendable gusto into the celebration of the day, a chief feature being the rowing regatta. The hour fixed for the "commencement of hostilities" was four o'clock, by which time at least ten thousand spectators lined the shores of the Merrimack river, where the races were to take place. The following were the events proposed and the prizes offered:—First race, distance 3 miles, four-oared boats (confined to Lowell boats), 1st prize, $100; 2d, $50. Second race, distance 2 miles, for single scull wherries; 1st prize, $50; 2d, $25. Third race, distance 3 miles, for six-oared boats; 1st prize, $150; 2d, $75. The J. Brady crew and Lennon crew entered for the first race, as there is considerable rivalry existing between the two crews, this race created the greatest excitement, and heavy bets were made by the friends of the clubs. The Brady crew drew the inside, and the Lennon won easily in 20:49, the Brady making the distance in 21:03.

For the second race William Appleton, Jr., of the Union Boat Club, Boston; W. D. Bagnell, of Chelsea; J. J. O'Leary, of Worcester, and John Landers, of Lowell, entered. Appleton drew the first position. A good start was made, Appleton leading the others for some distance; Landers, however, soon passed him, and distanced all competitors, winning the first prize. The following is the result of the race:—Landers, 16:16¾; O'Leary, 16:20.

The race for six-oared boats came last. There were three responded, viz:—the Lennon, the Brady and the Worcester. The Brady race was well contested. The following was the result:—Lennon, 21:34¾; Worcester, 21:51¾; Brady, 21:57½. The Worcester boat fouled, and forfeited the second prize, which was given to the Brady boat.

AT NEWBURGH, N. Y.,

the coming of "Independence Day" each year is a signal for the oarsmen of Newburgh and other neighboring points along the Hudson to "get to work, brothers, row," a regatta being invariably programmed. This year the sport, although but one race, for double scull boats, was on the card, was expected to be very fine, as some of the best pullers of New York state had signified their intention to compete. Probably the number of spectators gathered upon the banks of the stream, and seated in various craft resting upon its bosom, exceeded that assembled upon any occasion there since the memorable race between Hamill and Brown for the championship. The entries were five in number, viz., Murphy and Ten Eyck, Ward Brothers, John Mekeel and Schedgell, McCauley and Cameron and the Mekeel Brothers, taking their stations in the order given, the first named next the shore. An even start was given the boats by Mr. Wood and away they went, all pulling their level best, not only to win the first prize but to win reputation. Upon turning the upper stake-boat, on the last stretch, Murphy and his partner had a slight advantage, leading Mekeel's boat by a length, which they continued to keep, coming in winners of the race and the first prize, $100; Mekeel and Schedgell the second prize, $50, and the Ward brothers the third prize, $25. The only accident that happened during the race was occasioned by McCauley's boat colliding with a canal boat near the upper stake-boat, thereby spoiling his chance for either of the prizes. The judges were Capt. Tim Donohue, Isaac Wood, Jr., and Thos. Hastings, Jr.

THE ATLANTIC YACHT CLUB.—On Saturday, July 2d, at 3 P. M., the Atlantic Yacht Club, by invitation of Commodore Voorhis, visited Nyack, on the Hudson, where he has an elegant country residence. On Sunday divine service was held on board the Tidal Wave, the flagship, all the members attending. On the morning of the Fourth of July, at 5 A. M., a national salute was fired. At half-past 10 o'clock the yachts got under way for a race up the river to Stony Point and back. The following started:—Schooners Tidal Wave, Madeline, Calypso, Mystic and Commodore Kidd; Allen of the Brooklyn Yacht Club; Sloops, Storm King, Nimbus, Jennie, Niagara, Salua, Viking, White Cap, Coquette, Josie and Flying Cloud. At 1 P. M. the White Cap being opposite Harverstraw, and ahead of the fleet, went about on the home-stretch for Nyack. The squadron followed her example. The White Cap reached home first of the sloops and the fleet at 4.50, and the T

THE WHITE STOCKINGS IN NEW YORK.

THEIR DEFEAT BY THE ATLANTIC AND MUTUAL CLUBS.

The White Stocking nine of the Chicago club arrived in New York on the night of July 2d, fresh from a series of uninterrupted victories since they left Chicago, their latest triumph being their defeat of the Yale College nine at New Haven, July 2d. They entered the metropolis hoping to whip the strongest nine of New York and Brooklyn. Their first match was with the Atlantics, and this took place on the Capitoline grounds, July 4th, in the presence of a regular holiday crowd, for, though the admission fee was fifty cents, fully eight thousand people were present—at least that was the general estimate.

The Atlantics led off with a score of five to nothing, and the way they batted the rubber ball over the field showed the Chicago nine that they had, for once at least, met their superiors in heavy batting. In the second and third innings the Chicago nine alone earned runs, but by errors the Atlantics added six to their score, while the White Stockings could only add three to theirs. In the fourth innings the Atlantics scored six more, on two runs earned, and, while washing their opponents, left the totals at seventeen to four in their favor. Of course much of the interest in the contest now ceased, and hundreds began to leave the field in disgust at the miserable display. In the fifth innings, the Chicago players rallied at the bat to the tune of six runs to the Atlantics' three, but it did not avail them much, as the Atlantics added seven to their score in the next two innings, and retired the White Stockings for a single. Once more the Chicago nine tried to regain their lost ground, and in the next two innings batted heavily for eight runs, of which, by the way, they did not earn one, the Atlantics scoring four. This left the tally at the close of the ninth innings at thirty to twenty in favor of the Atlantics, and the White Stockings retired a badly defeated nine at their strongest point of play, viz: —heavy batting of a lively rubber ball. We give the full score of the game, which presents all necessary particulars:—

Umpire—Mr. John J. Grum, of the Eckford Club. Time of game—Two hours and forty-five minutes.

On Tuesday, 5th, the White Stockings took a rest, and on Wednesday, July 6th, they met the Mutuals on the Union grounds. In this contest the White Stockings allowed the Mutuals to present the ball for the game, and for once the New Yorkers selected a dead ball, and the result was not only a fine display of excellent fielding, but the most noteworthy triumph yet achieved by the Mutuals this season. The attendance was numerous, the charge for admission being but twenty-five cents. The Chicago nine went first to the bat, McAtee being their first striker, and the first and only man to score a run, the Mutuals fielding the others out in good style before more than a single was scored. The New Yorkers then went to the bat and scored, as well as earned, a run, the game thus opening promisingly for a close contest. In the second innings the two nines went into the whitewashing business, but little batting skill being shown on either side. In the third innings McAtee was again lucky enough to score a run, but by way of offset the Mutuals batted well for 3 and scored 4. In the two following innings, too, they added singles to their score after retiring the White Stockings for one run, the close of the fifth innings leaving the Mutuals in the van by the score of 7 to 3.

In the last four innings the Chicago nine were handsomely disposed of for a single run, while the Mutuals added six to their score, the New Yorkers thereby winning by the total of 13 to 4. In this game the White Stockings showed a marked inferiority in fielding to the Mutual nine, while their weakness in the pitching department was very manifest. The result was so entirely unexpected, and so different from that generally anticipated, that no doubt suspicions will be entertained in Chicago that the game was not played on the square. But that the victory was fairly won by the Mutuals there is not the slightest doubt. They played with more earnestness and worked together better than in any previous game they have played this season. We append the full score:—

WHITE STOCKINGS vs. UNIONS.

The Union nine, yclept the "Villagers," of Morrisania, returned to town from Baltimore on Friday, and the same afternoon met the White Stockings at Tremont. Under ordinary circumstances this meeting would have been interesting, inasmuch as the White Stockings have not been in trim since they arrived in New York, and therefore would have entered the lists under circumstances calculated to have insured the Unions a victory. But unluckily for the villagers, they, too, like the Chicago players, had been indulging in elastic ball games on their tour to Washington, and the result had not only been a well-merited defeat, but a disabled condition of some of their nine, which placed them at a still less available position for success than even the White Stockings were, for the Unions had to enter the field without their catcher, Birdsall, and Charley Pabor, without Birdsall to support him, is like a locomotive without an engineer, and just as likely to run off the track and smash things generally as to keep right and safe. The day—July 8th—was beautiful, and the grounds were in good condition, though a heavy rain fell the same morning. The attendance, however, was limited to a few hundred, no one caring to travel far to see a one-sided game, as this was expected to be.

Suffice it to say that neither club did justice to themselves, errors, chiefly owing to sore hands, being a prominent feature of the game. A ball with one ounce of rubber in it was used, and it was found elastic enough for hits yielding two and three bases when the ball was skilfully hit. In the first and third innings the White Stockings scored 4 and 9, when all they actually earned was one run. In regard to this point of difference between runs scored and runs earned, it happened that the first striker on the White Stocking side was put out, the second had a life given him by an error at first base and the fourth striker was put out. But for this error the result of the play would have been a whitewash, and consequently no runs were earned in the game, although afterwards good hits led to runs being scored. This is what constitutes the difference between runs scored and earned, which we show in the score below:—

Umpire—Mr. John V. B. Hatfield, Mutual Club. Time of game—Two hours.

The umpire kept the players down to a strict observance of the rules, and discharged his duties fairly and impartially, as far as we could perceive, but that did not prevent his being growled at by the "sore heads" of the village who were present. Of the play in the match, Gedney's out-fielding was the feature on the Union side, and Wood's second base play that of the other side, Treacey marking his play with some excellent catches. The weak spots on the Union side were the 2d and 3d bases, the two short stops of the nines also dropping into the muffin business. In batting, Bass and Meyerle took the lead. The Unions had better take a rest until Birdsall is well.

HARMONIC, OF BROOKLYN, vs. WAVERLY, OF FISHKILL.

The Harmonic Club, of Brooklyn, left 30th street at 8 A. M. on July 4th, and reached Fishkill at 10.45. On their arrival at the depot they were taken in charge by a committee of the Waveriys, of that place, and escorted to the Union Hotel, where arrangements had been made by the Fishkill boys for their entertainment. After an hour or so rest a first class lunch was served, after which the nine donned their uniform and began to handle a ball a little to put them in trim for the coming fray. The ground was reached at 2.15 P. M., and at 2.30, in the presence of about 500 spectators, of whom one-third were ladies, play began, with the Waveriys at the bat. The game was tedious, owing to the frequent necessity for both nines to hunt for the ball in the high grass in the out-field, and uninteresting owing to the disparity of the score. The Waveriys are excellent fielders, but their batting was very weak, not over half a dozen balls going to the out-field. On the other hand, the Harmonics batted splendidly and supported Sullivan well. Hatch showed that, on a decent ground and with a little practice, he will fill his new position with credit to himself and his club. The ground played on is wretched; high grass and holes in the out-field, and at the catcher's position about three inches of dust. The ball would not bound an inch after striking behind the home plate. It is also laid out poorly, the sun being in everybody's eyes except the catcher and striker. After the game both clubs sat down to a fine dinner. Speech making and singing were in order for a couple of hours, and then both clubs made a circuit of the village, singing on their way. The Harmonics returned to the city delighted with the gentlemanly treatment they received. The 4th of July, 1870, will long be remembered by them. On Tuesday, 12th inst., they play the Amateurs, of Newark, at that city. We give the score:—

CINCINNATI vs. FOREST CITY, OF ROCKFORD.

SECOND GAME.

The close game of July 2, score 13 to 14, brought down an immense audience for the second game between the same clubs on the 4th, probably 10,000 people being on the grounds, which were packed full along the entire circuit. The "Grand Duchess" was filled with ladies. The Reds had out their full nine, though both Geo. Wright and Sweasy were quite lame. Barstow's place in the Rockford nine was filled by Stires. Dr. John Draper, of the Cincinnatis, was selected for umpire, and game was finally called at 3.25, with the Forest City boys at the bat.

First Innings.—Addy opened the ball with a safe fair foul to left, taking second. Hastings hit a bounder to Waterman, who put him out at first. Barnes was captured on the fly by G. Wright. Simmons hit a long fly, missed by McVey, Addy getting home. Simmons stole third, but was left, as Waterman fielded Foley's bounder to first in time. One run. The Red Stockings made only the same number. G. Wright hit a feeble bounder to Spalding and retired at first. Gould made his first on a safe bounder over second, and got to third on a wild pitch. Waterman went out on fly to Barnes. Doherman, c e, 4 1 4 5 1 2

Of the play on the occasion, we have to speak of the good judgment displayed by the pitcher of the Dunderberg nine, and of the very good support he had in nearly every position, especially at first base, the only weak spot being the catcher's position. On the other side this position was the strong point, the first base play, too, being excellent. In fact the fielding all round was good. Peters pitched very effectively. In batting McNeil and Doherman made the best display. The umpire was impartial and prompt in his decisions, but he is evidently ignorant of the new rules, as he umpired the game in accordance with the rules of 1869. No warning is now required to be given to the pitcher, nor can the striker call for any ball he likes, he having to strike at every fair ball sent to him within fair reach of the bat and over the base.

TOUR OF THE HARVARD CLUB.

HARVARD vs. YALE.

Hamilton Park, New Haven, was the centre of attraction for a goodly number of persons of both sexes on the 4th inst., when the annual game between the representative nines of Yale and Harvard Universities was played. The game opened with Yale at the bat, the first innings not being noticeable except for a fine catch by Thomas. Score: Yale, 1; Harvard, 5. In the next three innings Yale added six to their score by good batting and loose fielding on the part of the Harvards. The Harvards increased their score by five only, being whitewashed in the third innings. In the fifth and sixth Yale made 12 and Harvard 9, the totals standing 19 to 19. At this point the excitement was intense. In the seventh innings, both sides playing well, added two to their respective scores, leaving the game still even—21 to 21. In the eight Yale scored but one and Harvard three, putting the latter two ahead, and the ninth resulting in a whitewash for both, the game closed with a score of 22 to 24 in favor of the Harvards. On the part of Yale the fielding of McCutchen, Richards and Buck was particularly noticeable, and the general batting was good. Of the Harvards, Bush, Wells and White excelled in fielding. The batting and especially the fielding of the whole nine was not up to their usual standard. The base running of Wells and Austin deserved the frequent plaudits it received. The following is the score:—

HARVARD vs. ROSE HILL.

A REMARKABLE GAME.

To the City of Venerable Elms, on Tuesday, 5th, the young students forming the base ball club of St. John's College, and known as Rose Hill, repaired, there to engage, for the first time in their college existence, the nine of Harvard. The Rose Hill left New York and its many beautiful ball fields to meet Harvard at Hamilton Park, New Haven, and why Harvard chose this spot in preference to Boston, is why with a wherefore needing explanation. Harvard desired it, because at New Haven they were to play on the 4th, and they could lie over one night, then hie back to Springfield and thence move on to Troy, and so fulfil engagements previously made.

Arrived at New Haven depot, the Rose Hill lads were met by Mr. McCutcheon, of Yale, and by him conducted to comfortable hotel quarters. For an hour or so the students ranged carelessly over the classic grounds of old Yale, looked wonderingly through the gothic-shaped grove, formed by old and stately elms, groped their way through the dark halls and passage ways of the antique buildings, bit their fingers to conceal chuckles when they saw the saloon, where the sunlight struggled through the aperture and disclosed the dust of a hundred years upon the walls, or stopped to read some written placard upon a wall or door relating the fact that within a student had a stove to sell. Students at Yale lead a strange life compared with the outside world. Study, nothing but study, is the rule. Every one appears a portable knowledge cask, and the old walls bear such a look of erudition, that one is tempted to imagine them built of books instead of bricks.

Around such a sanctuary as Yale ball play would seem a desecration, and so the park is removed some two miles off and there the game was played. As the clubs had dressed at their hotels for the play they began work immediately they reached the grounds. Mr. McCutcheon, the gentleman spoken of above, assumed the duties of umpire, and Rose Hill having won the toss, Eustis, the pioneer striker of Harvard, stepped in position. He hit to Trempe, at short field, and secured base though the nervousness of that player. Eustis worked to second whence he came home on a wild throw of Burns. Wells followed with a one-base hit, and got home through the wild play of Rose Hill. Trempe, Gleavy and Vila retired successively, the first fielded out by White to Perrin, the others on fly by Reynolds and Eustis. Reynolds opened the play in the second innings, Trempe muffing the ball and then overthowing it to first. Gleavy made an unpardonable muff of White's high hit, Reynolds running home; Thorpe struck out, and again Trempe muffed Eustis at short field; Wells hit out thirdly a second time, bringing Eustis home, and eventually slipped in himself, thus making six runs, when not one was earned.

Burns hit well for a base, but he became so wedded to it that he wouldn't move off, and there he was left, the side again retiring without a run. Close and pretty play disposed of both sides for a "zero" in the third innings, and also the fourth so far as the Harvard was concerned. Rose Hill scored two in the fourth, though not one was earned, Gleavy having twice put out, at first and home bases, but the umpire, the cases being close, decided otherwise. The fifth and sixth innings were played for blanks on both sides, which made a handsome game so far, the victory still being in dispute, for the score was a very light one. Up until this time Rose Hill had encountered hard fortune, while the fickle dame had smiled constantly on Harvard. But now it went from bad to worse. Harvard fell into a batting streak, the ball going everywhere but to a fielder, and they ran away from Fordham, bringing up only after they had scored 17 to the others' 2.

Viewing the two clubs from an impartial standpoint Harvard certainly appears to possess the better, but by no means are they licensed to treat Rose Hill in the way they did. From beginning to end the Fordham lads had no hard luck, battling straight to the Harvard men, while Harvard's hitting, though not generally as heavy, was fortunately safe.

Harvard is now on an extended and interesting tour, and if fortune favors them in every game as it did on Tuesday, they ought to win every ball they play for. After the game both clubs returned to their hotels, the Rose Hill leaving for home in the night boat for New York, and Harvard taking the early morning train for Springfield. Appended is the full score:—

HARVARDS vs. "HAYMAKERS."

The Harvard College nine visited Lansingburgh, N. Y., on the 7th inst. for the purpose of meeting the noted Haymaker nine on their own grounds. An umpire being agreed upon, Mr. Bush, the captain of the Harvards, claimed that McMullen and Allister had not been members of the Union Club for the requisite time, and protested against their playing. The umpire deciding the men ineligible, the "Haymakers" surrendered the ball and the game was awarded to the Harvards by a score of 9 to 0. Unwilling to disappoint the spectators, and wishing to test the strength of their respective nines, a "social" game was then mutually agreed upon, play being called at half-past three o'clock. In the first innings the Unions were retired without scoring, while the collegians tallied 3 runs, obtaining a lead which they held throughout, outplaying their opponents at every point, and winning the score 25 to 13. Fisher went in to pitch on the fourth innings, and after chances had been given to put the side out for 3 runs, the Harvards, by heavy hitting, secured 10. McMullen pitched the remainder of the game. The "Haymakers" seemed unable to get the range of Goodwin's swift delivery, and to this fact, in a great measure, is their unexpected defeat due. Bush caught superbly, passing but two balls and making several beautiful foul catches. Eustis is credited with a fine catch from York's bat in the eighth innings, while Perrin, Austin and White all deserve mention for brilliant play in the in-field. Flowers was very active at short, capturing five fly balls and retiring six men at first, Allister acquitted himself with credit behind, but threw rather wildly to bases; and Fisher at first had everything. Bush, White and Eustis, of the one nine, and Allister and York, of the other, led at the bat. Below we print the score:—

MARYLAND vs. PASTIME.

On Monday, the 4th, a game had been arranged to be played at Baltimore between the Nationals, of Washington, and the Pastimes, of the former place, at 10 A. M., but the Washingtonians did not come to time, and Wm. Lennon, of the Marylands, being chosen umpire, gave the game to the Pastimes by a score of 9 to 0, according to the rules of the National Association. Rather than disappoint the large audience which had gathered on the Madison Avenue Grounds, the Marylands took the place of the Nationals and walked off with the amateurs after a rather uninteresting contest. MARYLAND vs. KEYSTONE.

On the afternoon of the same day the Keystone Club, of Philadelphia, went over to Baltimore to measure sticks with the Marylands of that city, and met with a disastrous defeat, the "Blue Legs" getting away with them to the tune of thirty-eight to thirteen, much to the disgust of the backers of the Philadelphia club. The playing of the Maryland nine was the best they have done this season and reflected credit on their captain, Wm. Lennon, who is trying hard to get them up to a first class standard. The Keystones had considerable difficulty in hitting the pitching of Matthews. We append the score:—

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, July 11, '70.

THE CELEBRATION of the 4th having passed off with more than usual quietude, the can't-get-aways have resumed their labors for the summer, while those who have the inclination and means, are rushing off to the various resorts where the affluent and others disposed to make a display most do congregate. Many a man who goes to Long Branch, Newport, Cape May, etc., to show off his fine equipage and marriageable daughters, will come back bankrupt, without having secured a suitable matrimonial alliance for his dear children; when we say suitable, we mean in a matter of dollars and cents, for position is nothing with young ladies of the period if it is not well backed up with solid capital; money comes first—the question of respectability and of good standing in society being an after consideration with the "bright jewels" of a parent's household. Mothers and daughters will squeeze the bottom dollar out of a man's business but what they will shine out brilliant in the so-called fashionable circles who do the season away from home. To gratify the dirty pride and affectation of the female portion of the family for a few weeks at the seaside, the mountains, or the springs, a man is compelled to keep his nose to the grindstone for the balance of the year. Ah, well! It is one of the truisms that it takes all sorts of people to make up a world, and these latter must be tolerated with the rest.....At our theatrical boarding house, there has been a slight disturbance growing out of the attempts of the ice ring to put up the price of that commodity. Our landlady has shut down on the imposition of the ice men, and she asserts that those nigger bunkers (Knickerbockers, probably she means) can't get the better of her, no how; that's not the money she cares for, for she tells us boarders, "but it's the principle of the thing she looks at," etc. But between ourselves, dear readers, we believe the venerable dame is really glad of the opportunity to do away with ice. The consequence is, that cobblers, punches, smashes, etc., are put together at our house without the aid of the congealed luxury, and no reduction in the original charges for such beverages. Skiffen, the "heavy man," has melted to a skeleton during the heated term, but that giant intellect burns like John Brougham's danger signal. He asked, the other evening, "Why are our beverages like a pretty young lady on a picnic?" It was given up with the usual unanimity, when the Roman father replied, "because they are always not-iced." Owing to the debilitating effects of the weather this effusion was not up to his usual high standard, and Skiff went into the shade before young Rosina, who advanced the following: —"Why has a stout young lady going in swimming a hard lot in life?" "Because she is going to lave all behind her," suggested the Irish comedian. "Not so bad," replied Rosina, "and because she has a great deal to bare." There was a great deal of blushing and tittering among the gay Ophelias, and some held their fingers up to peep through in a frightened manner. Skiffen, with characteristic impudence, after reading of a western acrobat who forms herself like a table and lets powder be made out of stones thereon, remarked that feminine furniture was nothing new, as he once heard a song about a young woman, which said. "Thou art so near and yet so fa." The poverty of this would-be jest set all hands groaning, and Skiff, losing temper, remarked that "swimming was also like a table because there was a deal too much made of them; when it takes a pair to keep them well covered, and if they aint got good legs they aint worth a damn." Dr. Ambulance was talking to the assembled Thespians the other evening. Touching on psychological mysteries, he remarked that "if a child is born while its father is intoxicated the babe will become a devotee of Bacchus." "How do you account for that?" asked Skiff. "It is one of those unfathomable mysteries that baffle nature to penetrate. On the same rule, if the child is born while the father is at church, it will be religious; if while the parent is traveling, it will become a rolling stone; if the father is at home on the interesting occasion, the child will be domestic in its tastes." "I suppose," said the irrepressible Skiff, with the air of one who is going to say something smart, "that if the father is out fishing the child will be a fisherman." "Quite right," said the Doctor, who was quiet, not having got over the effects of 4th of July, "if the little thing's father is a doin' acroback fetes into a circus, the infant would be a perch." After this idiotic utterance, he laid his head back again and placidly went to sleep in his chair with the air of one who is at peace with all the world.....Talking about girls and things, the director of our poetic machine has just podred out the subjoined lines on the subject of

MATRIMONIAL DYSPEPSIA.

One introduction, when the event is summer thrives,
Twelve little walks and six long drives:
One bunch of blossoms, selected with care,
A row boat, a kiss, and a ringlet of hair;
Engagement, reception, jewelry, church and a carriage,
Moon cooked, served warm, makes a fine marriage.

Two weary faces, o'erwrinkled with cares,
Two little closets up four flights of stairs;
Bed, board and sliding—cradle ensues,—
Eight little feet to be covered with shoes;
Four little mouths that have got to be fed,
Pocket-weak bachelors, never get wed.

.....The latest and most important item about Nilsson is that she has given in each of her six brothers and sisters a farm. By farming them out in this way she probably hopes to be free from all future family claims. We have'nt heard what is Seebach's latest sensation—perhaps she has parceled out her poor relatives in some similar manner.....They are a queer sort of people on the frontier of Kansas, if all the yarns we hear of them be true. Among other things, we are told that the theatre-going public, when they would applaud performers, do so by yelling like Indians. Let an artist tickle their fancy, and they treat him to a regular Indian war-whoop. They gave this whoop to an eastern actress who performed out there a short time ago. Being ignorant of the customs of the country, she was greatly frightened at this sort of encore, and, leaving the play only half done, she escaped out the back way, and made all speed to the nearest railroad station. She imagined they were going to scalp her. She would have known, had she been possessed of the key to the mystery, that every lock on her head was perfectly safe in the keeping of that audience.....In fact, the west is a great country any way you can fix it. We are constantly hearing something strange about that region. The latest item is about a curiosity in the shape of a goat in Wisconsin that chews tobacco. We know those goats are not very particular about their grub; they will eat paper, leather, chips, and all manner of garbage; and we know that some domestic animals chew the cud; but that any beast could chew tobacco is something rather surprising. For the services the goat renders does he receive his quid pro quo in tobacco?".....Our actor friends having very little to do these days, some of them are employing their time in doing the juvenile business, making love in earnest, and getting married, not withstanding the hard times. It is reported that a wedding came off not long since, in which an actor of the "old man" persuasion performed a leading part, but the strange part of it was that one of the groomsmen led up a bridesmaid, and was married also. So there were two brides made on the occasion, making the event more than doubly interesting.....In some parts of this country it is the custom to speak of objectionable actions in any one as "carrying on." In such a place lived a youth, whose profligate habits made him a nuisance to everybody. He was the subject of conversation at a certain dinner table one day. A stranger was present, one of those phonetic fellows who never use two words where one will do; who abbreviate their sentences whenever they have a chance. He was much interested in the remarks concerning the scapegrace, and inquired, "Has he a business? Does he carry on anywhere?" "You better believe it," said an old woman who had "been there;" "he carries on awful wherever he goes; he ought to be in jail." That was a misapprehension such as often happens owing to the queer use made of many words in our language. A few lines on the point may afford an example.

USE OF WORDS.

That a strange use is made of many words,
Is surely every thinking man's conviction,
And that such usage oftentimes affords
Some mirth, because involving contradiction.
Often I mount my horse and on it sit,
Yet you would swear, I'm sure, call me a mounter,
And yet you call a note a counterfeit
That is not fit to lay on any counter,

.....Talking about beverages and ice, and all that, a queer excuse for drinking to excess was given to a stager by a friend, the latter "flying his kite" pretty high. "Why," said the member of the mimic world, "don't you drink in reason, if you will drink—why drink so much?" "Why, you see," was the reply, "I'm troubled with worms, and I drink whiskey to keep the worms drunk, so that they will keep still." "Ah," replied the actor, "the still worms are doing you more mischief than the animal."

.....We presume that our celestial brother "John," from China, who is kicking up quite a shindy among the shoemakers down east, is likely to command as much attention as the other slaves, whom have but recently been wiped out. Should he get ahead of St. Crispin, may not Koopmanschap try him on the stage line, not as a driver, mind you, but as a player of many parts on the dramatic boards. What a revolution such an innovation would create among the poor players, and what a glorious time of it the public would have in witnessing a play that would consume a whole week in the performance. Ah, it wouldn't do. Mr. John may make a good worker, but he can never make a good player, so Koopmanschap need not try them on that lay.....As a wind up to this hodge podge of stuff, we present a few little nursery rhymes by our broken Dutch fighting and running reporter, whom we have engaged at a heavy salary for this purpose:—

POOR LEEDLE TINGS.

Poor leedle abbie!
Hooked from de dress before you vas ribe,
By a feller dat passied you down his windbibe,
Only got hunk by makin him gribe—
Poor leedle abbie!

Poor leedle fly!
Smashed on der winder before you god out,
Vich knect your small heardt und your prains all about,
Und vich quite extonished you, I safe no doubt—
Poor leedle fly!

Poor leedle dog!
Knot in de sar mid a biece of hardt coal,
Din sans on your tail, vich behindt kig und roll,
You mused run like der docse do some safe, shady hole—
Poor leedle dog!

Poor leedle heart!
Dot fled off its book, so fast did it whirl,
Ven it heard some one "sloped" mid anoder nice girl,
Dis proke der shmall heardt, dishpotted der rich pearl—
Poor leedle heart!

City Summary.

THE FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE closed its season on Saturday, July 9th, having been open forty-seven consecutive weeks. During the early part of the season business was very moderate; and it did not seem to matter how often the bill was changed or what was the attraction, the result was the same. One or two good houses would greet fresh attractions, and then invariably drop off. But as the season advanced and the public became cognisant of the care and labor bestowed by the manager upon every production, and the earnest desire upon the part of all the artists to conscientiously discharge their duties, the business gradually increased. Still it must be admitted that the pecuniary success of the past season is due solely to the triumph achieved by "Frou-Frou" and "Fernande." We present as a matter of record the following condensed summary of the season's business, which commenced on Monday evening, August 16th, 1869. The following artists comprised the stock company:—Messrs. E. L. Davenport, George Clarke, J. B. Polk, George Holland, Harry Ryner, James Lewis, D. H. Harkins, W. Davidge, T. F. Egbert, W. Beekman, F. Chapman, J. M. Cooke, George Jordan, Jr., Pierce and Peck; Mmes. F. S. Chanfrau, Clara Jennings, G. H. Gilbert, Marie Wilkins; Misses Agnes Ethel, Fanny Davenport, Marie Longmore, Lena Edwin, Emma Kiehl, Ames, Emily Lewis, Almy, Norwood and Tyson. The officers of the theatre were—Lessee and Manager, Augustin Daly; stage manager, D. H. Harkins; prompter, Jules J. Beneaux; principal machinist, W. Saunders; property man, Jesse Saunders; costumer, Miss Fianley; scenic artist, James Roberts; musical director, Robert Stoepel, and A. Appleton, box office keeper. The opening bill consisted of a new comedy in four acts, by T. W. Robertson, with original additions by himself, E. L. Davenport, George Clarke, J. B. Polk, George Holland, Harry Ryner, James Lewis, Mrs. Jennings, Miss Agnes Ethel and Mrs. G. H. Gilbert were the only members of the company who appeared. On August 27th Miss Agnes Ethel withdrew on account of illness, and Miss Fanny Davenport supplied her place, appearing in the role of Rosie. "Play" ran until September 6th, at which time Miss Lena Edwin withdrew from the company. On this date another comedy by Robertson entitled "Dreams" was produced, which ran until the 27th, when "Old Heads and Young Hearts" was presented, in which Miss Marie Longmore made her first appearance for the season. This comedy was played on the 27th, 28th, Oct. 1st, and at the matinee Oct. 2d. "London Assurance" was produced on Sept. 29th. D. H. Harkins and Mrs. Marie Wilkins making their first appearance. It was repeated on the 30th and October 2d. On October 4th Miss Scott Siddons made her first appearance at this theatre, Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," in which Miss Agnes Ethel re-appeared, comprising the bill, which ran until the 16th, when "As You Like It" was substituted, which ran till the 21st inclusive. Mr. J. M. Cooke withdrew from the company on the 18th. On the 19th and 21st Mrs. Scott Siddons and Mrs. Clara Jennings exchanged characters, Mrs. Jennings appearing as Rosalind, and Mrs. Siddons as Celia, and vice versa. On the 22d, "King Rene's Daughter" and the "Love Chase" were produced and played the balance of the week. On the 25th "She Would and She Would Not" was produced, which kept possession of the boards until Nov. 8th, with the exception of one night, Oct. 26th, when "As You Like It" was played. On this occasion Miss Ames, who impersonated Hymen in the marriage procession in the play, was severely burned by her dress taking fire, an account of which we published at the time. On November 8th "Much Ado About Nothing" was produced and was played during the week, except Thursday evening and Saturday matinee, on which occasions "As You Like It" was presented for the last times. Mrs. Scott Siddons closed her engagement on the 13th, and Mrs. Clara Jennings withdrew from the company on the same date. On the 15th "Caste," a comedy by Robertson, was produced, in which Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau made her first appearance this season. It ran during the week, except on the matinees, Thanksgiving—Thursday—and Saturday, when "Second Love" was presented. On the 22d "Fernande" made its appearance; on the 23d and 27th, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts"; 28th, "Old Heads and Young Hearts"; 29th, 30th and matinee of the 27th, "Everybody's Friend" were repeated. On November 30th and 30th, one of the old comedies was repeated, and on December 1st "Daddy Gray" and "Checkmate" were produced for the first time, and not making a success were withdrawn after the Saturday matinee. "Everybody's Friend" was played in the evening. At the end of this week Miss Marie Longmore withdrew from the company. On December 6th "Wives As They Were and Maids As They Are" was produced, and was played during the week, save Thursday and Friday evenings, when "The Irish Hetress" was enacted. On December 13th, 14th, 17th and matinee of 18th, "Don Cæsar de Bazan" and "A Poor Goose" were presented; the 15th, "The Irish Hetress" and on the 16th and 18th, "Everybody's Friend" were repeated. T. F. Egbert withdrew at the end of this week and Frank Evans was engaged to supply his place, making his first appearance in the "Duke's Motto," which was produced on the following Monday, December 20th, and on which occasion Miss Ames re-appeared. It was played all that week including the Christmas matinee on the 25th, and during the succeeding week, commencing the 27th, every night save Saturday, when "Everybody's Friend" was played, as well as at the matinee. On the 31st of December Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau and Mr. J. B. Polk withdrew from the company. On the 3d of January the old comedy entitled "The Busy Body" was produced for the first time in thirteen years, and was played during the week except upon Wednesday evening, January 5th, when D. L. Davenport took a benefit, appearing in "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," after which he withdrew from the theatre. The comedy was continued the following week until the 12th, when Olive Logan's play entitled "Surf" was produced, in which George Holland played on the first night, but finding himself too feeble to continue, he withdrew and his role was filled by D. H. Harkins. "Surf" ran until February 5th, when Augustin Daly's version of "Frou Frou" was produced, which made a great hit, and was played over one hundred consecutive nights. At the matinee on the 26th, so great was the crowd, that the musicians retired from the orchestra and played upon the stage, yielding their seats to ladies. On April 18th, all the artists appeared in new costumes, and the furniture, upholstery and stage decorations were renewed; on the 20th, Miss Agnes Ethel received a benefit, on which occasion an original barcarole, composed by the musical director of the theatre, was first introduced and sung by Miss Ames and a chorus. On May 2d, George Clarke received a benefit. May 9th, James Lewis presented his name as beneficiaire. On the 16th, George Holland received a benefit and appeared between the acts upon the stage, seated and surrounded by the company. Being too feeble to address the audience, Mr. Daly read a brief speech which Mr. Holland had prepared. This and scenes of which appeared in our columns at the time. On the 21st the play reached its one hundreth consecutive representation, and was played for the last time on May 23d for the benefit of D. H. Harkins. On the 24th the old comedy entitled "The Good Natured Man" was played for the first time in fifty-two years, which ran until June 7th, when a version of "Fernande," by M. S. Cooney and Hart Jackson, was produced, and was played thirty-four times, the last representation being given on July 9th, after which the theatre closed for the season. The last night was a "ticket night!" for the benefit of the attaches. After July 1st, Miss Agnes Ethel, who played Fernande, and Miss Fanny Davenport, who enacted Georgette, withdrew from the company, and Miss Laura Phillips supplied the place of the former, and Miss Linda Dietz—who made her first appearance upon the stage of a regular theatre—that of the latter. The receipts of the season, according to the Internal Revenue returns, were as follows:—August, $5,517; September, $11,931; October, $17,845; November, $11,297; December, $12,386; January, $15,326; February, $13,357; March, $21,073; April, $16,657; May, 13,743. The returns for June and July not received.

MADAME KATHI LANNER'S VIENNOISE BALLET TROUPE will debut in America this evening at the Grand Opera House. Much has been written and said concerning these artists, and European report has loudly sounded their artistic excellence, all of which has been made available for advertising purposes, and we doubt not they will be welcomed by a large audience upon the occasion. The American people have a habit of relying upon their own judgment in matters of this kind, and are not influenced by foreign critiques or puffs, as the case may be, further than to allow their curiosity to be sufficiently excited to induce them to witness for themselves the artistic exhibitions they have heard others praise; therefore, if on the initial performance the "charming Viennoise" succeed in ingratiating themselves with the favor of the American audience, their success is assured, and they will have a long and brilliant season. Some twenty-four years since a troupe of juveniles from Vienna, under the management of Mme. Wiess, achieved much success through the principal cities of the Union, and many of our more elderly theatre goers will recall with pleasure the recollection of the artistic and graceful salutatory movements of the sylph like Fanny Prager. Since that period the taste for ballet here has been constantly improving, and naturally a higher degree of artistic excellence will be required to give equal satisfaction. The present troupe comprises, we are informed, ten premieres, eighteen coryphees, and a corps of pantomimists, besides accomplished male dancers and needful auxiliaries. The entire number of persons in the troupe being fifty-nine, which includes the costumers and mechanics. Their first effort will be the ballet pantomime entitled "La Giselle," which will be placed upon the stage with all the concomitants of scenery and properties, supplied in the lavish manner for which the establishment is noted, and their artistic correctness guaranteed by the long experience of stage manager Tilton. On Saturday, July 9th, the grand spectacle of the "Twelve Temptations" was withdrawn, having been performed twenty-two consecutive weeks, or about one hundred and sixty times, the extra matinees being considered. The names of the artists composing the ballet Troupe are as follows:—Mme. Kathi Lanner, premiere ballerina assoluta, from the Royal Imperial Opera, Vienna; Mlle. Bertha Linda, premiere danseuse, from the Royal Imperial Opera, Vienna; Mons. G. Venuta de Francesca, premiere danseur, from the Royal Imperial Opera, Naples; Mlle. Marie Gangani, character danseuse; Mlle. Minna Schultz, character danseuse; Mlle. Minni Berg, mimique and pantomimists; Mlle. Lena Schonberg, character and pantomimists; Mons. de Waldenburg, character dancer; pantomimists; Mons. de Waldenburg, character dancer; Mons. Alberti, mimic and pantomimist; Mlle. Carlotta Lindell, character and mimic; Mlle Maria Alexandra, mimic and pantomime. The director of the troupe is Mons. A. Geraldini; the manager, Mons. E. Raby; the chef d'orchestre, Mons. J. P. Hansen, and special business agent of the troupe, John F. Jones. In conjunction with this troupe the Ajax Parisian Ballet Troupe and a dramatic company will appear. Among the latter Mr. Harry Jackson will make his first appearance at this house this evening.

MARTINI CHIRISKI, the wire walker and juggler, sails for South America on the 6th inst., accompanied by Mr. Sandford. Mr. Chiriski goes out to join Sandford and Courtney's Circus. He returns in six months.

"A POOR THING, SIR, BUT MINE OWN."—EDITOR CLIPPER, SIR:—As "Clam," who is now figuring in London, and whom you mention in to-day's issue as the latest Parisian sensation, happens to be rather a particular friend of mine, will you kindly permit me to assure you that the young person in question first saw the light (though not the footlight), and privately enjoyed existence fully two years before the "White Hand; or, Jeweled Snake" was heard of. "Clam" was originally suggested by Josephine Fiddes, who wished to exhibit him at Astley's Theatre during the season of 1868, and to that end he was designed, constructed, etc., without the aid of other hands, or heads either, save Charles K. Ross', and yours truly, DOMINICK MURRAY, 210 East 14th street, July 5th.

W. H. LINGARD and Miss Alice Dunning arrived in town from San Francisco, on Monday, July 4th. They will pass the summer at Long Branch.

THE INFANT CHILD OF EDWIN BOOTH, we regret to announce, died in this city, July 9th, six hours after its birth. Mrs. Booth is still in a precarious condition.

W. E. SINN, manager of the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, is in town, at the Metropolitan Hotel.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME, combined with the reduced temperature of the atmosphere on a majority of the evenings of the past week, filled the Theatre Comique nightly. All the acts were fresh, and embraced an Ethiopian version of the farce entitled "A Quiet Family," under the title of "Bibbs and Bibbs," in which John Hart, Add Ryman, Madelaine Hardy and J. C. Stewart in the female character of Mrs. Bibbs, convulsed the audience with laughter. Johnny Queen followed in the "Broadway Dancing Master," in which he appeared in a white face, and illustrated, in a masterly manner, the various styles of dancing. Then the Schrotter Sisters executed a double Irish jig, with the approbation of the audience. In the laughable interlude, "Babes in the Wood," which followed, J. C. Stewart and Billy West were exceedingly funny, and Stewart's practical joke upon an "echo" was enthusiastically received. Miss Lizzie Kelsey sang the same songs as last week—a little more variety in this department would prove acceptable. A new rustic ballet divertissement, arranged by Mons. Grossi, entitled "The Village Festival," in which Mlle. Josephine Lusuardi was the principal feature, gave an agreeable variety to the entertainment. Add Ryman delivered a very funny burlesque Fourth of July oration, containing many political hits, which were highly relished by the audience. The "Shoo Fly Cancan," by Rose Lucille, Ida Greenfield, Fanny Lucille and Emily Herbert, by its boldness, dash and abandon, sent the blood tingling through the veins of the audience, and was encored. Master Barney, in his illustrations of the idiosyncracies of the Teutonic citizen, attempting to illustrate his ideas in pure Saxon, still holds a wonderful sympathetic power over his auditors, and nightly receives half a dozen encores. He is very quiet and unassuming, and his greatest effects are achieved without apparent effort. A burlesque of "Hamlet," which might have had its origin contemporaneous with the tragedy itself, was followed, after which Johnny Queen and Billy West danced the "Great Essence of Mooo," and the performance concluded with Charles Abbott's trick pantomime of "Hunky Doree." On Thursday, July 7th, G. W. Jester, the great ventriloquist, who rejoices in the sobriquet of "The Man with the Talking Hand," made his first appearance at this house and was enthusiastically received. It will be remembered he was brought to this country by Prof. Risley, and had hitherto appeared at the Tammany. His performances are really wonderful, his changes of voice are rapid and entirely distinct from each other and his impersonation of character is artistic. If he can be made to stick and fulfil his contract this Jester may do very well, but he is one of those performers of whose presence you are never certain.

THE FRENCH WRESTLERS, six in number, and Mons. d'Atalie, the "Man with the Iron Jaw," and Mlle. Angela, the "Female Samson," recently imported from Europe by Mr. Samuel Colville, made their debut in America at Wood's Museum, on Monday afternoon and evening, July 4th, and created a profound impression, and it was a question which to admire most, their feats or the perfect ease and grace with which they were executed. D'Atalie is a man of average size, with a compactly built and well knit frame, and as he walks for the first time upon the stage, there is nothing in his appearance to indicate the herculean strength he afterwards manifests. His countenance is pleasing and expressive. Among his feats was that of lifting a barrel, said to contain forty gallons of liquid. The barrel was rolled by him from the wings to the centre of the stage, the end facing the audience. D'Atalie, stooping, seizes between his teeth a piece of leather fastened to the other end of the barrel, which he gradually lifts from the floor, at the same time straightening his form to an erect position, which he has sooner assumed than an attendant, weighing about 145 pounds, is placed astride the barrel and two 56 pound weights are placed in his hands; all of which are supported with apparent ease for about one minute. Another feat consists of d'Atalie suspending himself from a trapeze by the knee joints; an attendant approaches him, having around his waist a strong belt, to the centre of which a swivel with a piece of leather is attached, when d'Atalie catches him in his arms, raises him and seizing the piece of leather in his teeth, holds the attendant suspended at full length in mid-air, as though resembling upon a couch. He then gives the attendant and the trapeze several revolves for some time like a tectotum. But his last feat was the most surprising and challenged the admiration of the audience, which broke forth in hearty applause; it was no misnomer to term it the "terrific ascent;" a strong rope running through a pulley fixed in the dome of the theatre, where are floating the flags of France and America, is pulled down to the stage, a small boy of some seven or eight summers is then brought forward, whom d'Atalie suspends from his own person in an easy graceful attitude, by passing the boy's feet through a belt around his waist, while a large silken cord passing around the boy's chest and d'Atalie's neck supports the upper portion of his figure. Seizing one end of the rope in his teeth d'Atalie is hauled up to the dome where he discharges two pistols, and is lowered to the stage, having, during this entire feat, no other support than his own jaw. Mlle. Angela is a young lady somewhat stout, yet well proportioned, weighing in the neighborhood of 180 pounds, has a pleasing face, which is ever wreathed in smiles, and accomplishes her wonderful feats with grace and apparent ease. A heavy steel bar, some eight or nine feet in length, and weighing at least one hundred pounds, she places across her shoulders upon a small cushion; D'Atalie then sits upon the bar, while two men sustain themselves at either end; Mlle Angela then carries this living freight thrice around the stage, when D'Atalie jumps to the ground, the other men retaining their positions. The lady then waltzes around the stage to appropriate music and subsequently twirls them around in a rapid manner, at the conclusion of which she was vociferously applauded. The French wrestlers, six in number, then came upon the scene, and are all muscular and splendidly developed. But two occupied the stage at any one time, and each couple in turn displayed different styles of wrestling, the whole manner of which differs materially from the English system. It is forbidden to have hold lower than the waist, although they may have hold of the head. The wrestling is with open hands and they strive to throw, catch or clasp their opponent's hands within each other, or interlace their fingers, but are allowed to grasp their own wrists to tighten their hold around their opponent's body. They must have their hair cut short, also their finger nails, and must wrestle either barefooted or with socks. To be conquered it is necessary that both shoulders of the fallen should strike the ground at the same time, and if one of the wrestlers fall on one knee, shoulder or side, they have to start again. The wrestling was most exciting. Their activity, quickness of motion and rapid turns demonstrate the high degree of skill they have acquired. Many times during the wrestling one would find himself in such a position that it seemed utterly impossible for him to escape being vanquished, for the throw about to be made appeared as though it would surely place him upon his back. The throw being accomplished we find him face to the ground, the turn having been made almost quicker than sight. At these clever displays of their art they were repeatedly greeted with applause. Their entire performance is novel and artistic. During this week new feats are to be introduced, among which may be especially mentioned that one of the troupe will raise from the stage to his shoulders a cannon weighing 700 pounds, support it there and allow it to be discharged while in that position. Little Nell has appeared during the past week in the "Little Treasure" and in a banjo solo between the acts. The evening's entertainment has concluded nightly with the pantomime of the "Green Monster," in which the Martinetti troupe appeared. D'Atalie, Angela and the French wrestlers will appear every afternoon as well as evening until further notice. As a matter of record we append the following brief description of the wrestlers, which we have obtained from authentic source. They are named Pierre Dubois, Joseph Arpin, Jacques Dumartier, Eugene Creste, Pierre le Duc and Francois Dubois. Pierre Dubois, the manager of the troupe, is 33 years of age, weighs 250 pounds, and is known as the "cannon man," from the Cirque Napoleon, Paris, and was the victor of the great international wrestling at London January 27th, 1870; Joseph Arpin is exceeding fifty years of age, weighs 180 pounds, is known as the "Savoyard Terrible," and is first of all French wrestlers, having achieved brilliant success in all the capitals of Europe; Jacques Dumartier is 38 years of age, weighs 170 pounds, and is known as the "Aigle Lyonnais," being the first of the French wrestlers of Paris, Lyons, Marseilles, Toulouse and Montpeller; Eugene Creste is 26 years of age, weighs 180 pounds, and is called the "Parisian Model;" he is the French champion of all men of his weight, and victor of the athletic wrestle of the International Exhibition of 1867. Pierre le Duc is 24 years of age, weighs 200 pounds, is a Belgian athlete and wrestler, the youngest of the troupe, and is known as the "great wrestler;" Francois Dubois is 28 years of age, weighs 180 pounds, is known as Moriet, and is particularly distinguished in Paris as the "snake" wrestler, on account of his great agility, vivacity and quick movements.

YANKEE ROBINSON was in town on the 9th. He has just purchased the elephant and the lions recently attached to the Australian Circus. Robinson's Circus will enter Lower Canada to-day, where they will remain for some time.

MESSRS. DORSON AND VILLA, managers of the Wallace Sisters' Burlesque Troupe, arrived in the city during the past week. They have just closed a profitable season, will rest during the summer, and start out for the fall and winter campaign in September.

JOSEPH K. EMMET will this evening make his debut upon the metropolitan stage as Wallack's Theatre as an actor, appearing in a play entitled "Frits, our Cousin German," written expressly for him by Charles Gayler, Esq., who is likewise his manager. Entirely new scenery has been prepared for the piece, and it is intended to have every advantage in the way of surroundings. Mr. Emmet has already successfully enacted the character of Frits, the German emigrant, in nearly all the principal cities of the country. During the past week Miss Lena Cavender and Mr. John Brougham continued to appear in "Ultimus Jack," and during the cool evenings the house was well attended. Of the merits of the play and the young lady we have already written.

CLIFTON W. TAYLEURE intends only to play Mr. J. L. Clarke during the space of five weeks, commencing in August, in some of the larger cities. At the expiration of this engagement he will turn his attention to management in Brooklyn and the neighboring provincial cities.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON will inaugurate the fall and winter season at Booth's Theatre about the middle of August. The only limit put to the engagement is that it shall cease when the nightly gross receipts shall fall below a given sum. At the conclusion of his engagement "A Winter's Tale" will be produced.

JOHN BERNARD, a leader of orchestra in the western cities, arrived here last week.

SAMUEL MYERS and lady, of McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, ill., arrived in town last week, and have gone to Long Branch, N. J., where they will pass a few weeks as guests of J. H. McVicker.

LYDIA PRICE and J. F. Cathcart leave for San Francisco, Cal., July 13th, where they will shortly play a star engagement at Maguire's Opera House. They will be accompanied by William Wintle, husband of Miss Price, and Mesdames Wintle and Cathcart.

THEODORE HAMILTON has resigned his position at Booth's Theatre.

MINSTRELSY BY MOONLIGHT at Kelly and Leon's has attracted good audiences during the week and an attractive programme has been presented. Mr. Edwin Kelly sang with effect the ballad entitled "The Soft Dew is Sleeping," and Leon appeared in an act entitled "Follies Dramatique;" Lischen, in "Lischen and Fritzchen," and as Fo-an-lique;" Lischen, in "Lischen and Fritzchen," and as Fo-an-nich-ton in Offenbach's opera "Ching Chow Hi." Master Clarence Burton appeared in a song and dance, entitled "Love Among the Roses;" Dave Wilson in a bone solo, "Love Among the Roses;" Dave Wilson in a bone solo, and S. S. Purdy gave his budget of songs in the first part and played Bad Dickey in the "Ladder of Fame." The present week will terminate the season at this establishment. George and Willie Guy, who have just returned from England, make a re-appearance at this house to-night. A change of programme is announced, among the principal features of which will be the burlesque opera of "La Belle Helene." The company is expected to be augmented by the addition of several artists after the close of the present season, and will then travel, appearing first at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, July 18th, for six nights, thence to Washington, D. C., 25th and 26th; Baltimore 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th. Charles Melville will accompany them as business manager.

RITA PERCY, the "Queen of Statuary," whose action in the Mount Vernon memorial ceremony has made her popular with the profession of this country, is announced to commence an engagement at the Old Bowery Theatre on the 18th inst. Many new and beautiful single studies are to be represented by Miss Percy, while in the groupings she is a season on the Jackson Street Lot, on the 17th, under very favorable auspices. The attendance since the opening night has been uniformly large, and the exhibitions in some respects have been excellent, and, as a whole, equal to the general run given by similar organizations. The great star of the circle, and the principal attraction, is a young phenomenon named Charles Fish, an uncommonly bold and graceful bareback rider.....John McCullough left for Virginia 30th ult., and was to appear at Piper's on the 1st for the benefit of Lawrence Barrett, as Othello, to Barrett's Iago; and, after playing two more nights in the 'Marble Heart,' as Velago to Barrett's Raphael, and once as Richelieu, was to proceed direct to New York city.....Miss Olive Logan delivered her lecture on 'Girls' to a fair sized house at Platt's hall 28th ult., and by 'special request,' so the programme read, she called the Burlesque Blondes all kinds of ugly, unlady-like names, in a most unwarrantable manner. She made a magnificent failure, her second lecture, the 'City of Luxury,' being delivered to row upon row of empty chairs. The public is evidently of our opinion, that of the two evils the blondes are to be preferred to Miss Olive Logan.....M. R. Leavitt and wife (Miss Hattie Forrest) will start overland next week.... Notes from the Interior.—The Lingard season at Sacramento closed June 22d, which was set apart for the benefit of Miss Dunning, and was attended by a large and fashionable audience.... The Bates troupe, in conjunction with the Pixley Sisters, will close their season at the Oro Fino Theatre, Portland, Oregon, on the 4th of July. The Pixleys intend to depart then for Montana and other territories, and the other members of the troupe will enjoy a vacation, re-opening again in September. Mrs. Bates took a benefit on the 18th inst., after which she retired from the boards. Her place was then filled by Miss Yeomans, who opened last Monday in 'The Colleen Bawn,' as Eily O'Connor, supported by the Pixleys and the company..... The Chicago Minstrel Troupe are entertaining Oakland at Shatuck's Hall, Oakland, June 25th, for the benefit of the Liveoak Zouaves.....L. F. Beatty and troupe gave performances at Woodland on the 15th and 20th, meeting with little success.....The Museum of Living Wonders was announced to exhibit at Portland, Or., on the 13th, 20th and 21st inst.....A company of professionals, styling themselves the California Dramatic Club, gave a musical performance at College Hall, Oakland, last night, 24th.....Lawrence Barrett and the California Theatre company are playing to good houses at Piper's Opera House, Virginia City.....Bartholomew's Lilliputian Circus was billed to perform at Yreka last Monday.....Carl Bosco, the wizard, performed at Stockton on June 20th. .....Parron and Wilson's Minstrels have been performing at towns in Eastern Nevada, during the past week.....The Overland Circus performed at Grass Valley on June 23d. This combination is making its way over the mountains. .....A Stockton paper announces that Dupree and Benedict's Minstrels will shortly come to that place.....The Oriental Circus exhibited to a crowded pavilion at Sacramento last Monday, and performed at Vallejo on Wednesday, with equal success.....Sue Robinson, Milton Nobles, Mrs. Poole, and the company from Piper's Opera House, have been performing in the mountain towns of this state and Nevada during the past week. They performed at Carson on the 22d, at Reno on the 23d, at Dutch Flat on the 24th and at Grass Valley on the 25th.....Charles Fish, the talented young equestrian of the Oriental Circus at the conclusion of his principal act on June 24th was presented with a basket of flowers accompanied by a small jewel box containing a costly pair of diamond studs.....A troupe of acrobats, athletes and wrestlers from the Imperial Circus, Paris, are expected to arrive overland during the week commencing July 4th. They will be under the management of Vincent, Deligne and Perrier..... Mr. Joseph Proctor, the actor, accompanied by his wife and daughter, has just returned from Yosemite Valley, where they have been sojourning during the past two weeks. They contemplate going east, and intend, it is rumored, after a brief stay, to return to the Golden State and make it their permanent home."

W. S. HIGGINS' DRAMATIC COMBINATION played the afternoon and evening of July 4th and the evening of the 5th at Griswold's Opera House, Troy, appearing in "Dora" and "In and Out of Place." Emma and Lizzie Maddern have recently joined the company.

JENNY WILMORE'S LONDON BURLESQUE COMBINATION will open at the Theatre Royal, Montreal, C. E., on July 18th. The troupe has been completely re-organized and now consists of the following artists:—Jenny Wilmore, Lizzie Wilmore, Marian Taylor, Nettie A. Hicks, Annie Blake, Emma Devoy, Felix Rogers, Harry Everett, J. Pritchard, A. W. Cooke and J. H. Huntley; Sig. Operti, late of Niblo's, leader of the orchestra; Felix A. Rogers and William Severna, managers.

CONCERNING CHICAGO THEATRICALS our correspondent, "Amusement," writing July 8th, says:—"The glorious fourth proved a substantial day for the different places of amusement, which were all crowded, both at the matinees and evening performances. At the Opera House 'The Green Huntsman' sounded his bugle on the fourth, for the last time, for the benefit of Geo. J. Dengle, the manager, and succeeded in drawing two excellent houses. The troupe has been disbanded, the scenery packed up, and 'The Green Huntsman' is numbered with the things that were. One of the brightest features of the piece has been La Rita Sangall, who is pretty, agile and graceful, and has succeeded in recording her customary triumph over the affections of the habitues of the house.....Aiken's Museum was deked at each of the five performances given on the fourth. The week commenced with the drama of 'Horse Shoe Robinson,' being an appropriate piece for the fourth. The patriotic speeches and the heroic defiances hurled at the British were received with great applause. The play was given by Mr. Aiken's company in a really excellent manner. Mr. Padgett had a congenial part, which he acted in a most happy manner. Mr. Lounds made a great success in the part of Chis. Shaw. Mrs. Barry's portrayal of the heroine, Mildred, was a charming piece of acting and the audience was liberal with its applause.....At the Dearborn the Lluris were favored with a good house at the first presentation of their new pantomime, 'Harlequin Ride a Cock Horse.' The play introduced the Lauris as Clown, Pantaloon, Harlequin and Columbine, in which parts they fully sustained the reputation they have won here. The pantomime abounds in funny tricks and incidents, among which is the magical cabinet and the very funny feats of horsemanship performed by the Clown on a toy quadruped.....At McVicker's Mr. McVicker took his 'last chance' on the 4th, and on the 5th and the remainder of the week the house has been occupied by the Russian Concert Troupe, who have drawn very bad houses. They are all certainly excellent musicians and should have a larger share of the patronage of theatre goers."

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Buffalo, N. Y., was re-opened on the 4th, afternoon and evening, and was completely packed. "The Dutch Governor," "Forty Winks," "Hidden Hand" and "Toodles" constituted the bills. W. H. Southard will indulge in a benefit on the 9th inst., when he will produce "Nobody's Child." Billy Allen, the well-known "essence" performer, has volunteered, also Luke Martin, concertina performer, and a young lady of this city will make her first appearance in public, says our correspondent "Frank."

H. W. MITCHELL AND MISS KATE QUINTON have been engaged for the coming season at the Academy of Music, Troy, N. Y. They have recently played several successful engagements in the South and West. Mr. Mitchell is a tragedian of merit, and will play the leading business, and Miss Quinton will play soubrettes, boys, burlesque and musical parts.

THE "DRUMMER BOY OF SHILOH" was performed six nights at Franklin Hall, Bridgeport, Conn., commencing July 4th. The performances of the week were for the benefit of the monumental fund of that city.

Musical.

BRIGNOLI'S OPERA TROUPE occupy the Theatre Royal, Montreal, July 11th, 12th and 13th, when the following operas will be produced, "Il Trovatore," "Martha" and "Lucia di Lammermoor."

CLARA PERL gave her second grand concert at Saint Patrick's Hall, Montreal, Canada, July 6th.

ADELAIDE PHILLIPS volunteered to give a concert for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association in San Francisco, Cal., on June 30th. Joseph Levy, cornet; Sig. Carmini Morley, tenor; W. Campbell, basso, and Prof. George T. Evans, conductor, appeared.

J. E. HARTEL, leader of orchestra, can be addressed as per advertisement.

JOSEFINA FILOMENA and troupe gave a concert at Masonic Temple, Ky., July 6th, which was very slimly attended.

GRAND FLORAL CONCERTS, by 200 children, under the direction of Miss Agnes O'Neil, are announced to take place at the Opera House, Newark, N. J., on the 15th and 16th.

SPAULDING'S SWISS BELL RINGERS gave two concerts in Boston on the 4th, and, it is reported, took three thousand eight hundred tickets at the first concert, and three thousand three hundred at the second. The following notice of the performance is taken from the Boston Herald:—"MUSIC HALL.—Two entertainments were given at Music Hall in the afternoon, and both were attended by audiences that completely packed the hall, the performers being the Spaulding's Vocalists, Swiss Bell Ringers and Comedians. The exhibition was a good one, and afforded much pleasure to those who attended."

A BARITONE SINGER is wanted for the Berger Family Bell Ringers. See advertisement.

A VIOLINIST and solo alto player advertises that he can be engaged.

MR. HIRAM POWERS gives a concert at Hopkins' Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, July 11th.

Variety Halls.

THE VARIETY COMPANY now performing at Petrolia, Canada, have been doing a fair business. The following persons have been added to the company:—Charley Gilday, clog dancer and song and dance man, who made a hit, and Ari Hoiston, an impersonator of female characters, who was likewise well received.

ANNIE HINES was the fresh attraction at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., during the past week.

COOL BURGESS and his Ollo of Oddities appeared at Mechanics' Hall, Montreal, Canada, July 9th, and will continue the 11th and 12th. The following artists compose the troupe:—W. Hamilton, baritone; Miss Clara Vernon, soprano vocalist; Harry Stanwood, solo banjoist and comedian; W. Grey, song and dance; Minnie Wells, burlesque actress, and G. Watkins, buffo singer.

CHARLES L. HOWARD and Ada Franklin open in Scranton, Pa., during the state fair in September.

MORTON AND SUTTON, song and dance artists, advertise that they can be engaged after Aug. 1st.

TALENT is wanted for the Winter Garden, New Haven, Conn., which is now running under the management of John R. Goss.

THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., under the proprietorship of C. M. Welch, with W. J. Thompson as stage manager, will be opened for the regular season about Sept. 1st. A company of first class artists is wanted.

ROBERT PERCEY, gymnast, and the young Lesters, in their double trapeze act, appeared July 4th, afternoon and evening, at Brady's Curriculum Rink, Jersey City. On the 9th, Dr. Ah-foon, the Chinese Magician, gave his manipulations there.

MAJOR RAIBER, proprietor of Raiber Hall, located on Frederick street, Baltimore, Md., has nearly completed the alterations upon his hall. A spacious gallery, a new proscenium, stage and stock of scenery have been added. Its capacity is for 800 persons. The hall will be freshly frescoed, and when completed will be one of the handsomest devoted to variety entertainments in that city. So writes our correspondent 'Don Juan.'

OUR CINCINNATI correspondent writes as follows:—"Business here has been dull, owing to the oppressive heat. The company at the Race Street Theatre has been cut down, Fielding and Willis on the ends, and Frank Carleton as interlocutor, being the only gentlemen left. Miss Carrie Armstrong, a very fair songstress, was added to the troupe this week. Carrie Avery's 'change' songs take well, the performance being new to this burg. Maggie Fielding is about to do the same business. Next week will close the very successful engagement of the Fieldings at this hall. Miss Addie Sprague is still ill, and unable to appear. .The Alhambra is still unopened, though it is said the litigants will compromise and allow it to resume next week.....Charley Sullivan is now managing the stage at the Academy of Music, Clark Wells having retired from the company. A new addition has been made this week in a little song and dance boy—Master Willie, who is quite clever. The remainder of the company remain unchanged from last report .....Diefenbach's company did not play in Hamilton on the 4th, because they could not get music. They play there to-night (Friday) and to-morrow, and if successful, will probably keep on to Dayton and other places. Those who went up from here are Hen Mason, Phil Diefenbach, Maggie Clair e and Mr and Mrs McAvoy.....Charley Bartine has organized a company to 'do' the county fairs, in a tent, consisting of Millie Bassers, Carrie Austin, Lillian Ward, Appetite Annie, Clay Allen, Master Eddie, E. C. Smith, Frank Mulholland, Charley Bartine, and Powers' cornet band. They will open at Nashville, Ind., July 18th, instead of the 12th, as originally contemplated. Bartine and several of the company are now playing in German halls 'Over the Rhine,' in this city."

THE OPERA HOUSE, Petroleum Centre, Pa., was opened on July 4th, under the management of Snowden and Rabin with Lizzie La Grange, song and dance lady as the star attraction, and the following company, viz:—Lizzetta, Belle Helene, Bessie Starr, Jim Hays, Billy Turner, Bob Lane, Joe Hayes, C. H. Bishop. Mr. Geo. Edwards and Miss Emma Parsborg make their appearance there on the 11th inst. First class talent is wanted.

THE TAMMANY VARIETIES, Bay City, Mich., is reported as doing a fair business, with the old company in a new programme. The management advertises for talent.

PEDANRO is at present performing at Smith's Island, Philadelphia. Managers can address him as per advertisement.

THE METROPOLITAN HALL, Washington, D. C., company is now composed of the following:—Alice Somers, Minnie Grey, Carrie Bentley, Kate Barrows, Larry Tooley, Joe Mack and James Porter. Our correspondent, "Novice," says that "Miss Somers is quite an acquisition, calculated to become a great favorite. As a clog dancer she is very successful, and surpasses any female in this line I ever saw. She was encored in her clog dance three times, and the last dance seemed to be given with as much energy and vim as the first. Later in the evening she appeared in a song and dance, and created as much enthusiasm as when executing a clog. She is the finest looking lady for some time past, and she will probably retire altogether from the company. Larry Tooley has made a great hit in his Dutch specialties. He appears to ignore Ethiopian acts, except end business, and now confines himself chiefly in representing Dutch characters. He appears as Heindrich Vontrumbleback in a very humorous sketch called 'Searching for a Situation,' and also assumes the character of Gottlieb Rhineheimer in the 'Dutchman's Ghost.' Mr. Porter, the stage manager, takes a benefit on the 11th instant. J. H. Cummings, late of the Tammany, and Frank Bell and Tony Harvey have volunteered. The new feature of introducing four end men in the first part will be arranged on the occasion, Tony Harvey and J. H. Cummings taking the tambourine, and Larry Tooley and Joe Mack the bones. The principal attraction of the evening will be a trial song and dance for a silver goblet valued at twenty-five dollars, and a purse of money for the same amount. Alice Somers, and Messrs. Cummings, Bell and Tooley will participate in the dance."

FRANK WOOD closed a four weeks' engagement at the Howard Athenæum, the past week, and is now in Cleveland, O.

DONELLE, mimic, character vocalist and female impersonator; Louie Irving, vocalist, soubrette and boys, can be addressed care of this office.

MADORI ARNOLDI made her first appearance at Wild's Varieties, Buffalo, N. Y., on the 4th inst., and was received very favorably. She dances finely. Sixty-seven acts were given on the 4th, and the the theatre was crowded both afternoon and evening. Jennie Eagan, dancer; H. W. Eagan, comedian, and Jessie Farran, dancer, appear on the 11th inst. So writes our correspondent "Frank."

THE VARIETY BUSINESS at East Saginaw, Mich., continues to be good. At the Opera House the entertainment is good, new stars appearing nightly.....The Adelphi continues to entertain the public in good style.

FIRST CLASS TALENT are specialties are wanted for Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., which will commence the season about Aug. 15th

JOSIE MORRIS made an appearance at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., July 4th.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Albany, N. Y., closed its doors after the performance of the 5th, which was for the benefit of manager William Veeder, and was well attended.

THOMAS ROONEY has opened a variety hall in Sioux City. On July 3d, Pelton and Sweet received a complimentary benefit.

ROBT. BYRNE, Irish vocalist and comedian, advertises that he is prepared to make arrangements for the coming season.

Negro Minstrelsy.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELLS have not had it all coleur de rose, as we say in the French classics, since they left New York. The heated term struck them soon after they commenced operations at their first stand on their travels, in Philadelphia, and although they had a pretty good opening week, the second, owing to the heat, did not keep up with the first in a pecuniary sense, although artistically their entertainments afforded the greatest amusement to those who patronized them. When they struck Washington and Baltimore the "big hot," as "our Jim" calls it, burst upon them in all its fiery effulgence, and this operated to a certain extent to the disadvantage of the proprietor, who, therefore, informed his performers that, in consequence of the pressure of the times and the debilitating effects of the warm weather, he should be obliged to cut down salaries five dollars per week each man. A caucus was held by the company and the proposed reduction discussed pro and con. Those who were getting small salaries thought it would be more equitable for the manager, instead of chopping off five dollars each man, to deduct so much from each in proportion to the salary received, which would put the heavy licks on those best able to bear them; so a note to this effect, we are given to understand, was drawn up by certain of the members and submitted to the manager, who, it appears, was greatly offended at the course pursued by these men, and would not permit them to dictate to him what he should do, and at once several of the recusant minstrels were given leave of absence at once, among them being Messrs. Rockefeller, Russel, and another, whose name we have forgotten, and thus the rupture was complete, and Mr. Bryant and the balance of his party proceeded to Pittsburgh, while the freedom of speech men, who had thus suffered for their freedom, went on their way, but not rejoicing, to New York, there to await the chances for an opening with some other troupe, which is not likely to offer much before September. While we do not uphold combinations of men to coerce employers into their views, we at the same time hold that where men place their grievances before employers in a proper spirit, without assuming to dictate what shall be done, it is but fair that employers should give their views fair consideration, and treat the men squarely and honorably. In this case, if we have been rightly informed, the position assumed by the low salaried men was very proper, for if one man gets twenty-five dollars, another fifty, and another seventy-five, it is certainly unfair to deduct as much from the man receiving twenty-five dollars as from those getting fifty and seventy-five. We may have been misinformed in regard to the real facts; if so, we shall be ready to make the correction, but from all we have been able to learn of the subject, we believe the statement we have given above to be correct and impartial.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS commence a season of six nights at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill., July 11th.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS were at the Academy of Music, Cleveland, O., July 7th, 8th and 9th.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS played to a crowded house in Lexington, Ky., July 5th, where Manning and McKee are considered favorites.

MORRISON'S MINSTRELS, now organizing for their fifth annual tour, are in need of first class talent. W. & G. Barbour are also requested to address as per advertisement.

HAPPY CAL WAGNER is in need of talent to complete his troupe. He starts for his regular annual tour from Syracuse, N. Y., on Aug. 15th. For further particulars see advertisement.

JOE H. MACK, who, for three years, has been advance agent for Skiff and Gaylord's Minstrels, received at Columbus, O., a few days ago, a handsome testimonial in the shape of a cane, valued at sixty-five dollars, from some of his friends in the profession. The letter accompanying the present is published in another column.

CHARLEY BURTON, late with Arlington's Minstrels, is passing a few weeks at his home in Charlestown, Mass.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS appeared for three nights, commencing July 7th, at the Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky., and played during the week ending July 9th at De Bar's Opera House, St. Louis, Mo.

A CORRESPONDENT FROM PEORIA, ILL., enquires "why some large minstrel party does not visit that town." He considers it one of the best show towns in the west, and thinks some of the troupes now traveling could make a hit there. Managers take notice.

THE GEORGIAN QUADROON MINSTRELS, fifteen in number, appeared on July 4th, at Brady's Curriculum Rink, Jersey City.

M. B. LEAVITT, the well-known Ethiopian comedian, starts from San Francisco for New York, July 6th, overland, stopping at all the principal places before reaching Omaha, and giving his sensation and olio performance. He will probably arrive in New York about August 10th.

LON MORRIS, whose address is in another column, is prepared to receive applications from steady performers for his next traveling season, which will commence about Sept. 1st.

DAN BRYANT'S MINSTRELS have just concluded a successful engagement of six nights at the Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., and open in Columbus, O., July 11th, thence to Indianapolis, Ind., the 12th and 13th, and Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky, on the 14th, 15th and 16th.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS exhibited two nights, July 5th and 6th, at the Opera House, Columbus, O.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS gave two farewell performances on July 4th, at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O., to excellent houses, and exhibited the balance of the week at De Bar's Opera House, St. Louis. Skiff and Gaylord will appear at this house July 20th and 27th.

LA RUE'S MINSTRELS closed at Omaha, Neb., July 6th. The theatre closed its regular season with their last performance.

Circuses.

MURDER OF TWO CIRCUS MEN.—While John W. Robinson & Co.'s Circus were exhibiting at Potosi, Wisconsin, a man named Brent persistently attempted to create a disturbance during the entire day; he had been driven away from the main door of the large tent several times, when he went to the side show and had a wordy quarrel with Phil. Milligan, the proprietor. A short time after Milligan went to the hotel for supper, and Brent followed him, and presenting himself at the door of the dining-room, he drew a revolver and discharged its contents indiscriminately among the guests, mortally wounding two men, Archy McAurther, the boss canvas man, he having been shot through the head, and Ridgeway, a driver, shot through the lungs. Brent then ran out of the house, and was met by John King, the boss hostler, who shot him through the arm, but he succeeded in making good his escape. The company, aided by many armed citizens, turned out on horseback in pursuit, but were unable to find any trace of him. Particulars of the affray were telegraphed in various directions, which caused his arrest at Pokerville on July 2d. The company is now in Iowa, where they exhibited in Dubuque, July 4th; Belvidere, 5th; McCongheyville, 6th; Marmouth, 7th; Cascada, 8th; Drisville, 9th, and will be in Monticello, 12th, and Independence, 13th. Richard Beeswick, vaulter, recently joined this circus at Plattsville, Wis.

THE GREAT AUSTRALIAN CIRCUS, which has been exhibiting on Long Island during some weeks past, disbanded on July 5th. It is said that unpleasant feelings have existed for some time between the two proprietors, which culminated in an open rupture at Riverhead on the date mentioned.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS will exhibit at Jackson, Mich., July 12th. A correspondent writes that business has been very good in that state, and states that J. W. Naylor, the ring master, is very ill; also that Madame Pauline's pad horse is rapidly losing its sight.

THE EUROPEAN CIRCUS is exhibiting in Canada, and was at Markham, July 4th; Oshawa, 5th; Bowmanville, 6th; Port Hope, 7th; Cobourg, 8th; Brighton, 9th, and will be this week at Belleville, 11th; Sterling, 12th; Hastings, 13th; Peterboro', 14th; Lindsay, 15th; and Manilla 16th.

O. W. NOYES' CIRCUS exhibited in Memphis, Tenn., June 30th, July 1st and 2d. They will travel through Tennessee and a part of Kentucky. While they were exhibiting at Oxford, Miss., Tom Polsell, while the procession was moving, in attempting to get upon the band-chariot slipped and fell, and one of the wheels of the chariot passing over, crushed his foot. He is now confined to his bed, but will be out in a few weeks.

G. G. GRADY'S CIRCUS exhibits in Ohio this week at the following places:—Fostoria, July 11th; Findlay, 12th; Mount Blanchard, 13th; Johnstown, 14th; Kenton, 15th, and Richmond, 16th.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS will exhibit in Chicago, Ill., during this week, commencing July 11th.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS and animal show exhibited at Sioux City, Iowa, July 4th, they went thence to Missouri Valley Junction and Kansas City.

STONE AND ORTON'S CIRCUS and caravan of camels exhibited in Sedalia, Missouri, July 2d. The following is a list of the company:—Miss Orton and family; Vannandt Brothers, gymnasts; L. Munson, contortionist; Andy Gaffney, cannon ball juggler; Hi. Marks, principal clown; Little Minnie, the champion child rider; Mlle. Caroline, bareback equestrienne; Miss Jessie, Mrs. Miles Orton, W. Stowe, John Carroll, W. Holland, Cornell, Cooke, Richards and Gleason. The company go to Winsor July 4th, thence to Kansas City via Fort Scott, where they will be about the 18th.

GARDNER AND POREPAUGH'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS exhibited at Reading, Pa., July 4th. At the afternoon exhibition George Shafer was presented with a gold medal by his friends of that city.

THE BENSLEY BROTHERS are performing with Washburn's Circus, which exhibited at Fair Haven, Conn., July 9th.

DUFF AND CO.'S METROPOLITAN CIRCUS are exhibiting along the towns of the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette Railroad. They exhibited at Greensburgh on June 29th; Morganstown, 30th; Martinsville, July 1st, and Bloomington, July 2d.

THE KINGAID FAMILY, equestrians and acrobats, five in number, including a child rider, can be addressed as per advertisement.

C. T. GRADY'S NEW ORLEANS CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is now showing in Tennessee. Our correspondent, "E. D. G.," writes us as follows concerning the season thus far:—"Business since leaving New Orleans has been excellent until we reached Georgia, where it fell off immediately, owing to the great scarcity of money, and the anticipated failure of the coming cotton crop, which will, undoubtedly, prove true. The licenses in Tennessee are enormous. We had to pay the following in Shelbyville:—State license, $100; county, $100; courthouse, $100; school tax, $50, and corporation, $50, making in all $400 per day. At Edgfield, Tenn., on July 11th, we leave railroads and will travel by wagons. Our route will be through Kentucky, thence through Illinois into Iowa. As many changes have occurred in the company since starting out I will give you a revised list:—Miss Lucy Watson, Ella Eugenia, Louisa Bosbell, Mlle. Carlotta, Nellie Whitney, Mrs. John Lawton, Millie Tournour, Harry Tibbs, E. D. Gooding, Johnny Lawton, Bali and Milton, Adolph Gonzales, Fred. Watson, Sig. Montiverde, Allen Smith, Alfred Tournour, Johnny Redden, Fred. Hamilton and Prof. Joe Kingslow's Brass and String Band. The show was at Waverly, Tenn., July 4th."

DAN CASTELLO'S CIRCUS exhibited at Bay City, Mich., July 9th, and at East Saginaw the 11th.

HEMMINGS, COOPER AND WHITNEY'S CIRCUS and Menagerie exhibited in St. Louis during the week ending the 9th, and will open at St. Charles, Mo., July 11th.

DE HAVEN'S CIRCUS passed through St. Louis July 7th, on its way South. They will exhibit in the towns along the route of the Iron Mountain Railroad. Johnny Davenport has left Johnson & Co.'s Circus and joined this party.

ANDY SPRINGER, of James Robinson's Circus, was in St. Louis July 7th, making arrangements for the early appearance of that company.

CAMPBELL'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS will exhibit at Columbus, Ohio, July 16th, Circleville, 18th, and Chillicothe the 19th.

A FIRST CLASS EQUESTRIENNE is wanted for G. G. Grady's Circus. See the manager's address in another column.

TOM BARRY, clown and lyric jester, is prepared to engage for the balance of the tenting season. Address as per advertisement.

WM. NAYLOR, hurdle rider, has left Thayer's Circus, his horse having fallen lame. He advertises that he will shortly be prepared to accept engagements.

Miscellaneous.

RAND'S HALL IN TROY, N. Y., is now undergoing a course of necessary repairs. It is being frescoed, and three large ventilators are being added to the roof. The hall will be re-opened to the public about the middle of August.

OLIVE LOGAN delivered her second and last lecture, "Paris the City of Luxury," at Platt's Hall, San Francisco, Cal., June 29th.

WALTER MONTGOMERY gave two "Recitals" at the Mercantile Library Hall, San Francisco, Cal., July 1st and 2d.

PROFESSOR MACALLISTER, the illusionist, appears at Battle Creek, Michigan, July 11th, 12th and 13th.

BURNHAM AND QUEEN'S GIFT SHOW exhibited at Stoneham, Mass., on the afternoon and evening of July 4th.

THE RINK, Grand Rapids, Mich., is advertised to let by the night or week. It will seat about two thousand persons, and is furnished with scenery and other requisites for giving dramatic entertainments.

WM. J. METCHER, whose address find elsewhere, can be engaged as advertiser or treasurer.

THE HEYWOOD AND CHIBBEI COMBINATION will start on its fifth season's travels about Aug. 15th.

A VARIETY PANORAMA is advertised by James Heywood in another column.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Bloomington, Ill., is advertised to lease or rent for all first class exhibitions.

SATSUMA'S ROYAL JAPANESE TROUPE appeared during the week commencing July 4th, at De Bar's Opera House, St. Louis, Mo. They had hitherto performed some nine nights at the new temple in that city.

COMMODORE FOOTE AND TROUPE appeared at Kalamazoo on the 13th and 14th.

THE NEW $20,000 SKATING RINK at East Saginaw, Mich., was formally opened to the public on the Fourth, with a general jubilee and celebration, the principal feature of the programme being skating on parlor skates, by Callie Curtis. The rink is of brick, of the Harvy patent, and was built by the Harvy brothers, of Buffalo. It is owned by a stock company, styling themselves the East Saginaw Rink Association. The rink is a very large one, and will be used during the summer for pic-nics, parties, &c., and in winter for the legitimate line of business.

JOHN BOGAN advertises banjos and other musical instruments for sale, and he teaches jig and clog dancing.

A ROUND TOP CANVAS, with appurtenances, is advertised for sale.

A STEREOPTICON, with two hundred views, is advertised for sale.

MAGICAL APPARATUS and the new aerial suspension can be had of Henry Stone, who advertises.

ANN E. LEAK, the armless lady and Mad. Nora, the lady glass blower, gave an exhibition in Altoona, Pa., on July 4th, and raked in four hundred and eighty-six dollars, it is said. On the 5th they left for Louisville, Ky.

THE DAVENPORT BROTHERS gave one of their exhibitions of "Spiritual Manifestations" in Bay City, Mich., July 7th, and contracted to exhibit at Flint, Mich., on the 8th, but did not appear, writes our corr spondent "M. A. W."

HARRY MACARTHY and Lottie Estelle appeared in their entertainment at the Academy of Music, Indianapolis, Ind., July 9th.

PROF. HANSLEY, magician and ventriloquist, performed at the Rink in Madison, Ind., July 4th and 9th. He has purchased the canvas, seating and staging of Cushman's hippotheatron, which recently came to grief in Kentucky. He is assisted by Zagrino, the Spanish gymnast, who is creating considerable excitement by his "Leap for Life" through a balloon on fire.

WHITE CLOUD and a troupe of Indians are the special attraction at Maj. Burnett's Museum, Pittsburgh, Pa., this week.

A NEW HALL is being built in Sioux City, Iowa, which will be fitted up with a commodious stage and scenery. It is anticipated that it will be finished by the middle of September next.

THE OPERA HOUSE, Lexington, Ky., will seat about eleven hundred persons, and is furnished with a stage, scenery, &c. Parties desiring to rent the house will find the agent's card elsewhere.

THE OPERA HOUSE, Sharon, Pa., is furnished with eight hundred and fifty chairs, scenery, dressing rooms, &c. For further particulars see advertisement.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

OUR LONDON ADVICES are up to June 26th, and contain little novelty, which we will briefly chronicle. The heat has been extreme and the audiences small.....At the Haymarket "Married Life" and "Home" still constitute the attraction. "Home" will be withdrawn after July 7th. On the 8th Mr. Sothern is announced for a benefit, when he will appear as David Garrick, on the 9th Mr. Buckstone will take a benefit, and the season will close. The season at the Lyceum closed on July 2d.....At the Adelphi, the Queen's, Prince of Wales and the Vaudeville there has been no change of programme. "Little Em'ly" was revived at the Olympic on June 27th, where also was underlined for production on July 2d a grand spectacular romance adapted from Fouque's beautiful legend of Undine, written in verse by R. Reece.....At the St. James' Mrs. John Wood still appears in "Paul Pry" and "La Belle Sauvage," and the season is announced to close on July 16th. At the Strand Miss Elise Holt re-appeared June 22d. The Sunday Times says:—"On her return from America she has secured a re-engagement at this house, and gave Mrs. Swanborough energetic aid, with results which abundantly prove that she has not been entirely forgotten during her absence from the country."....At the Oaiety Miss Lydia received a benefit on June 30th, and closed on the engagement July 2d. The Charing Cross closed on June 24th with a benefit to Mr. Millward, the acting manager.....A new drama by Charles Reade, in which Mr. Hermann Vezin will appear, is in rehearsal at the Gaiety. It was underlined for production on July 4th. .....In consequence of the illness of Henry J. Byron, "Not Such a Fool as he Looks" was withdrawn from the Standard's programme, and "Masks and Faces" substituted. At this house, on June 24th, Benjamin Webster had a benefit, when E. A. Sothern appeared in a "Regular Fix."..... At the Alexandra the "Sergeant's Wife" was the most noticeable production.....At the Holborn Amphitheatre the wonderful illusion of the "Ethescope" bewilders and amuses all who witness its clever effects. On June 23d, at this house, "Rose Lyane" was performed, for the purpose of introducing to the London public Master John Stanley, styled "the great Australian child actor," who achieved success.....On the occasion of Miss Wingfield's benefit at the Holborn, on June 29th, the screen scene from the "School for Scandal" was given, with the following cast:—Mr. Vining, late lessee of the Princess', played Sir Peter; the beneficiary played Lady Teazle; Mr. Morton, Tavarez, and Mr. Fairclough, "whose trans-Atlantic reputation has been endorsed in this country," portrayed Charles and Joseph Surface.....Miss Glyn gave a farewell dramatic reading at St. James' Hall, June 21st, prior to her departure for Australia.

J. C. COWPER, who so conpanied Kate Bateman to this country, is starring in the Royal Amphitheatre, Liverpool.

THE GLOBE THEATRE, London, has been leased by Grace Alleyne, who has engaged Walter Lacy as her stage manager.

J. L. POOLE commenced his provincial tour, July 4th, under the management of Edward Saker and Joseph Eldred. His tour will terminate July 23d. Henry Leslie commenced a six nights' engagement at Leicester, June 27th.

DAVID STWART, the Scotch comedian, died at Glasgow, June 12th, after many months' protracted suffering, aged 58 years. He leaves a widow and four children.

SIDNEY FOSTER, an old actor of excellent position, died at Islington, June 23d, after an illness of three weeks duration. He was of good family entered the profession at a very early age and made his first great success at Astley's, where he represented the Duke of Wellington in the military spectacle entitled "The Battle of Waterloo." He left the stage some years after and became the treasurer of Astley's, which position he held for twenty years. He afterward held a like position at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, and, at the time of his death was the treasurer of Philharmonic Hall, Islington.

JAMES BENNETT, some years since leading man at the Boston Theatre, Boston, recently received a benefit at Birmingham, when he played Iago in "Othello," after which the music of Macbeth was sung by 100 voices.

SAD END OF AN ACTRESS.—On the 10th of June an inquest was held in Stepney, London, Eng., on the body of Isabella Tinon, aged 23, an actress lately performing at the Alhambra Theatre, Aberdeen, in that city. The deceased was known by the professional name of Miss George, and took the part of Marzippa in the play of that name, recently produced at the above place of amusement. It would appear from the evidence that she was enceinte, and had made an application of a peculiar character to a medical man, who is at present in the House of Detention under remand. The post-mortem examination of the body proved that she had expired from the effects of injuries inflicted upon her person with instruments while an attempt was made to procure abortion. Her child has also been killed by the same misadventure.

Musical.

AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, London, Eng., during the week commencing June 20, the following operas were presented:—"La Favorita," with Lucca and Mario; "Il Ballo Maschera," with Tietjens; "Le Nozze di Figaro," with Lucca; "Esmeralda" twice, with Adelina Patti; "Huguenots," with Lucca and Mario.

KELLOGG has created a great furore in singing Desdemona to Salvini's "Othello," at Drury Lane, London, Eng.

Variety Halls.

HARRY SIDNEY'S FUNERAL.—an account of whose death we published last week—on June 21st, was largely attended, every music hall in London being well represented, while the entire staff of Sam Collins' music hall attended in a body. The esteem in which Mr. Sidney was held by all classes is most touchingly and powerfully shown in some letters discovered among his effects after his decease. These documents are from the pens of the late Mr. Thackeray and the late Charles Dickens. They testify to his worth as a man and his ability as a singer. With the Oxford and Cambridge crews he was ever a favorite, and the letters from the captains of both crews are also among the interesting autographs of the public and private esteem in which this lamented gentleman was held.

AT LEE LONDON MUSIC HALLS there has been no changes of performance of import since our last advices, accounted for, doubtless, from the fact that rural scenes and pastures new are more attractive than city life during the "summer solstice."

HARRY FOX received a benefit at the Middlesex Music Hall, London, June 23d.

THE HAMLON BROTHERS intend leaving London for Paris early in August, under the management of F. Strange, of the Alhambra, at which place they will re-appear on their return from Paris.

Negro Minstrelsy.

BUTTERWORTH'S TROUPE OF CHESTY MINSTRELS appeared in Birkenhead June 24th and 25th.

Circuses.

DISTIN'S
CELEBRATED ENGLISH CORNETS,
used by the most eminent solo players in the world, from $28 to $90. Mr. Arbuckle, of Boston, says:—"I cannot possibly say too much in favor of your Cornets." Mr. J. Levy, the great soloist, says:—"In my opinion they quite surpass every instrument of the same character that I have previously tried."
CARMEL, PUTNAM Co., N. Y., May 26, 1870.
GENTLEMEN.—I have much pleasure in saying that the celebrated Distin instruments we have purchased have given the greatest satisfaction. They are perfectly in tune, and their short, light action renders execution as easy as say rotary valve, while the tone is far superior for power and brilliancy. I can cordially recommend them at every opportunity, as I am sure they only require to be known to ensure their preference over all others in this country, even as they are preferred in Europe. Wishing you every success,
I remain yours truly, W. JOHNSON,
B. M. Carmel Saxhorn Band.
These instruments are manufactured with the latest modern improvements and possess an evenness and equality of tone that cannot be produced upon instruments with ordinary pistons or rotary valves. List of prices and drawings mailed free. BOOSEY & CO., 4 Bond street, New York, Agents for Distin's Military Musical Instruments. Boosey's Complete Cornet Tutor, 20 cents. The following are a few of the extracts selected from many hundreds published in the California journals:—
THE BRITISH BLONDES again have been greatly encouraged and elated by the spectacle at Maguire's Opera House last evening. It was packed full in every part, and they were received with oft repeated and tumultuous applause. There was a lively distribution of encores, and such a profusion of bouquets that the recipients seemed several times at a loss to know what to do with them, and tossed the tributes about with a recklessness that was quite amusing. The costumes of the principal artists were very brilliant. The scenery was quite good, and the manager's accent with "Diana" was very fine, as was also the closing tableau.—San Francisco Evening Bulletin, June 17, 1870.
THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE TROUPE were received with all the honors last night, a theatre crowded to its capacity and no end of enthusiasm, bouquets, baskets of flowers and recalls. When the curtain raised on "Luna" there was a hum of expectation until the representative of the "Chaste Goddess" came on, and then a storm of applause for the new star, Miss Rose Massey. She is beautiful, of symmetrical figure and has a graceful carriage, with the most lovely golden tresses. She was accepted at once as a favorite. She is as beautiful as a picture when the flood of light is thrown on her at the back of the stage, and she knows how to choose a graceful and picturesque attitude to best display her beauty. Miss Eliza Weatherby (another handsome blonde) as Endymion shared in the applause and received the larger number of bouquets for her singing. She has a nice voice and sings well. Miss Ada Harland as Cupid attracted a good deal of attention by her dancing and singing. She has a pleasant face and grew in favor with each scene of the burlesque. Mr. Harry Beckett, the low comedian of the troupe, made an immense hit as Actaeon, and especially in his singing of little local allusions in the A B C song. Mr. G. F. Ketchum as Pan was hardly less successful than Mr. Beckett.—Daily Alta Oalifornia, San Francisco, June 17, 1870.
THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE BLONDE BRIGADE, last night, drew a house so crowded that there was scarcely room to breathe. In every part of the theatre a dense crowd of anxious expectants were packed in as tight as the seats could hold them. The performance commenced with the farce of "To Oblige Benson," in which Mr. Harry Beckett proved at once his claim to be considered a first rate comedian. There is no discount on that, if I'm no mistake, and we can with pleasure record his complete success. Miss Eliza Weathersby also played Mrs. Southdown with much spirit, and made her position sure with the audience. "Luna" was produced, Miss Weathersby appearing as Endymion, Miss Rose Massey as Diana, Miss Ada Harland as Cupid and Mr. Beckett as Actaeon. The first named lady is a pretty, plump and lively body, with an enjoue manner and a pleasant voice. Miss Massey is a tall, exquisitely formed girl, possessing limbs of the most perfect symmetry. Her "Love among the Roses" was vehemently encored. Miss Harland is a capital dancer and very graceful. The great success of the evening was the series of nonsensical verses sung by the above named artists, which were received at times, each verse producing a new set of verses, from the apparently inexhaustible repertoire of the performers. Much laughter and applause rewarded the performers during the evening for their exertions.—San Francisco Daily Morning Call, June 17th, 1870.
THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE BRIGADE, who came tripping on on Thursday evening, were warmly received by a large audience. To say that this is a startling, dazzling, fascinated, overcome with admiration. They are all "stars" in their particular line, and are as perfect in burlesque as the most ardent admirer of this style of performance could desire. They opened in a very amusing burlesque entitled "Luna." The blondes sing, dance and act superbly; their costumes are rich and gorgeous and the house has been crowded to overflowing. They will doubtless fill the Opera House for several weeks.—Golden City, San Francisco, June 19, 1870.
ON THURSDAY one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Maguire's Opera House congregated together to witness the opening performance of the far famed BRITISH BLONDES. The entertainment commenced with the farce, "To Oblige Benson," in which Miss Weatherseby appeared as Mrs. Trotter Southdown, and Harry Beckett as Mr. Trotter Southdown. These two established themselves at once in the favor of the audience. Beckett is an excellent comedian and certain to become a great favorite. Miss Weathersby possesses a splendid figure and expressive countenance. The burlesque of "Luna" followed, introducing the whole blonde troupe; Miss Eliza Weathersby appeared as Endymion, and charmed the audience with her handsome person, fine singing and graceful dancing; Miss Ada Harland, as Cupid, led the troupe as a dancer, and received much applause for her performance. Miss Rose Massey appeared as Diana, goddess of hunting, and afterwards as Luna; Miss Massey is a strikingly handsome young girl and she is tall, graceful and exquisitely shaped. Mr. Harry Beckett as Actaeon made a great hit, more especially in a series of nonsensical but witty verses, in which well known local characters were touched off. Mr. Ketchum was scarcely less successful. The leader of the troupe are excellent singers and accomplished actors. The second and third nights of the blondes were no less successful than the first. The Saturday matinee was densely crowded. All the express desire of many ladies there will be a grand "Luna" repeated on Wednesday afternoon.—Golden Era, San Francisco, June 19, 1870.
Regarding the burlesque of the period, we went to Maguire's, expecting great things and were blessed to exactly that extent. The new company is good. If there is a lovelier, better formed, more graceful girl than Rose Massey anywhere around we are willing to hold a competitive examination and report on the subject. Ada Harland, who does Cupid, Nanon and Fra Diavolo, both sings and dances well. Eliza Weatherby (Endymion) is a pogonip, golden blonde, who carries all before her. Harry Beckett is undoubtedly a first rate low comedian and showed to advantage in the burlesque. G. F. Ketchum dressed and acted a very comical Pan. Maguire's burlesque season promises to be a decided success.—San Francisco News Letter, June 18, 1870.
THE BRITISH BLONDES, who made their debut before the San Francisco public at Maguire's Opera House on Thursday evening, have taken the city by storm. Indisputable evidence of that fact was furnished by the enthusiastic demonstrations of pleasure which their performances have elicited from the densely crowded audiences that filled the theatre to overflowing the last two nights. Many persons on each evening were turned away on account of the lack of space in any part of the auditorium to accommodate them. The dramatic attractions chosen by the blonde troupe to begin their irresistibly charming assault on our theatre going public are the comedy of "To Oblige Benson" and the burlesque of Luna." The former piece serves to introduce the company and places them on the most favorable terms with the auditors, preparing them to be captured en masse by the second part of the entertainment. The performances of last evening passed off with even more eclat than upon the opening night. A better comedian than Harry Beckett has never been seen on the stage of this city, and his equal in burlesque acting has never visited the coast. His coadjutor, Mr. Ketchum, is excruciatingly comical, and is also a capital actor. Rose Massey, tall, graceful, exquisitely proportioned, Juno like in her style of beauty, who, as Luna, is transformed into a veritable Dido when the arrow of Cupid pierces her heart, again captivated the audience last evening. Her song and dance, "Love Among the Roses," achieved another triumph for the fair artiste. Miss Eliza Weatherby as the love torn Endymion appears to excellent advantage, with her pleasing face, clear voice, brilliant enunciation, finely developed form and winning manner. She was again the recipient of marked favors throughout the evening. Pretty, agile, scintillant Ada Harland, whose dances like a fairy and sings beautifully, has become a special favorite. Miss Heathcote and other members of the company are very efficient in their respective parts. The British Blondes are destined to prove popular favorites for a long season, if we may judge from the triumph they have already achieved.—San Francisco Figaro, June 18, 1870.
MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE.—This popular theatre was crowded to suffocation last night (not an inch of room being unoccupied), when the famous British blondes made their first appearance. The performance commenced with the capital farce, "To Oblige Benson," and in the character of Mr. Trotter Southdown Mr. Beckett at once proved to the audience that he was the very best low comedian who ever trod the boards of the San Francisco stage. The admirable manner in which he made all his points, the play of his features, and the expression he threw into his utterance, all betokened the finished artist. Mr. Beckett's fun is infectious; it sets the whole audience in a roar. Eliza Weatherby looked charming in the character of Mrs. Trotter Southdown, and played it in an unaffected, natural manner, which pleased every one. The audience, put in a thorough good humor by the farce, waited patiently during the short interval which elapsed between its conclusion and the rising of the curtain on the first scene of the burlesque of "Luna." Miss Massey not only looks pretty but is a good burlesque actress, reading with thorough force, emphasis and very pleasing accent, and sings charmingly. Eliza Weathersby as Endymion looked so very pretty that it seemed a shame that she should not have the moon or anything else she cried for; her singing, dancing and acting were deliciously piquant. Miss G. Harland is a delightful little Cupid, sings beautifully and dances bewitchingly. Connie Thompson makes a pretty Arethusa. Miss Kate Heathcote as Endos, read, sang and acted well—but a carefully selected company of artists who all have talent and experience in their profession.—G. F. Ketchum caused much amusement in the part of Pan. Maurice de Solla's fine voice was heard to advantage. E. H. Chapman was funny as the Doctor. We have not forgotten Harry Beckett, who throughout the piece seemed the spirit of mirth; he was very amusing throughout in the character of Actaeon, and performed one of the most wonderfully ludicrous dances ever seen on any stage. The same entertainment will be presented to-night, and those who are not pleased with it must indeed be of that class whom it is impossible to please.
